

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

THE GOSPEL TAKEN INTO EUROPE

International Sunday School Lesson for July 6, 1941

GOLDEN TEXT: "Come over into Macedonia and help us."—Acts 16:9.

(Lesson Text: Acts 16:6-15)

With this lesson we begin the second half of a six months' course in the study of the Acts, the Epistles and the Revelations. Through this study we are endeavoring to learn the history of the early Church and the secret of its power in order to better cooperate with God in building an effective Church today.

About two years after Paul and Barnabas returned from their missionary journey, the former suggested that they again visit the churches which they had established in Asia Minor. This was probably about a year after the Council at Jerusalem.

Paul had already achieved a wonderful success with his mission to the Gentiles but he was not a man to be content with past accomplishments. His ambitious spirit, inspired by the vision of his apostleship to the Gentiles, was unwilling to remain at Antioch. Always, to his dying day, the urge with Paul was to go onward, to carry the new gospel to regions which had not heard it.

A difference of opinion rose between Paul and Barnabas as to the advisability of allowing John Mark to accompany them on this journey. Paul, acting from a stern sense of duty, was unwilling to take this young man who had failed them in Pamphylia and withdrawn from their party in the earlier tour. Barnabas, perhaps influenced by his kinship, was just as determined to give Mark another trial. The record of Mark's subsequent life shows that Barnabas was justified, but at the same time there was no assurance of this. The contention was kept enough that these two co-workers agreed to separate.

Barnabas and John Mark sailed to Cyprus, the native island of the former, and although we have no further record of his activity, we can be assured that he performed valiantly in the cause of their faith. Paul selected Silas, who had come back from Jerusalem with him from the Council, and hereafter these two were associated together in missionary activity. While the dissension which had separated Barnabas and Paul appeared unfortunate, the result was that two missionary parties went from Antioch, thereby doubling the number of workers in the field. Each of the original partners was probably freer to pursue his own methods under the new arrangement.

Paul and Silas followed an overland route to visit the churches in Asia Minor. Passing through the Cilician Gates in the Taurus Mountains they revisited Derbe, Lystra, Iconium and Antioch in Pisidia. Paul wanted to carry the gospel directly west, towards Ephesus, but was deterred by the Holy Spirit, therefore he went through Phrygia and Galatia, two regions in the interior. At that time Paul wanted to go into Rithynia to the north, the region just south of the Black Sea, but again a divine conviction caused him to travel westward. Without stopping to teach or preach in Mysia they reached Troas, a seaport, located very close to the site of the ancient city of Troy, made famous by Homer.

While at Troas, Paul had his famous vision of a man of Macedonia who made the historic request, "Come over into Macedonia and help us." There has been some discussion as to the character of this vision. We know that Luke, author of Acts, joined the Pauline party at this point because in verse ten begins the "we" passages of this book. It is thought by some that Luke was a native of Macedonia. Others believe that Paul's vision was divine.

At any rate, the great apostle was positively convinced that God had directed him to carry the gospel into Europe. No decision more momentous in the world's history was ever made. It sent Paul and the gospel which he carried in the direction of the empire, to the people who contained possibility of ruling world affairs. It is almost impossible to imagine history if Paul and his party had traveled toward the Orient instead.

Landing at Neapolis, a seaport, Paul and his party proceeded to Philippi, an important city of Macedonia. Nearly one hundred years earlier the Roman Republicans, Brutus and Cassius, had been defeated by the Imperialists, Anthony and Octavius. The nearby city was made a Roman colony in honor of this victory, which meant that its citizens had the same privileges as the inhabitants of the home capital. There was no synagogue in Philippi but Paul went to a "prayer-place" or Jewish proselytes and on the Sabbath made his first European convert. She was Lydia, a seller of purple-dyed cloth, who had come from Thyatira in the little province of Lydia on the western coast of Asia Minor.

Tells How To Make Good Hay Crops

T hay crop should yield at least a ton per acre and three tons per acre are possible in North Carolina, says E. C. Blair, Extension Service agronomist at N. C. State College.

Here are some of the rules for good production set out by the specialist:

All hay crops respond to a fertile soil. They take large quantities of plant food from the soil. The non-legumes get all their food from this source. Legumes, if inoculated, can draw about two-thirds of the needed nitrogen from the air, the other third necessarily coming from the soil. For these reasons, hay crops should be grown in rotations to which legumes are turned under and should be well fertilized.

The presence of plenty of usable plant food and lime in the soil not only results in bigger yields but also in hay of higher feed value. Such hay contains more protein, vitamins and mineral matter than the same kind of hay grown under conditions of soil poverty. Animals fed on this hay grow faster, develop better bones and are healthier than those fed on hay low in these materials.

Stable manure is a valuable supplement for fertilizers in all parts of the state and should be used alone at the rate of five tons per acre in most sections.

Lime also is valuable in that it will increase the yield and mineral content of hay, if the soil needs it. While certain crops, such as alfalfa and red clover, refuse to grow satisfactorily on moist soils without an application of lime, others will grow without it.
