

Safety Talks

Ninety-five of the 100 North Carolina counties were charged with one or more traffic fatalities for the first nine months of this year, and 66 of these showed increases over the same period last year, the Highway Safety Division reports today. Perquimans County was charged with four traffic deaths through last month.

The only counties with clean records at the close of September were Alexander, Avery, Cherokee, Dare and Polk.

For the state as a whole, there were recorded 857 fatalities during the first nine months of this year, an increase of 37 per cent above the 622 listed through September of last year. This was about double the national increase.

The counties with the worst records in comparison with last year are: Wake, 39 against 16; Davidson, 21 against 6; Pender, 16 against 6; Onslow, 13 against 2; Halifax, 16 against 6; Durham, 20 against 8, and Cumberland, 34 against 18.

An even 100 of the 857 fatalities occurred in the 28 cities of the state, against 94 in the same period last year. These included 18 in Charlotte, 12 in Durham, 8 each in Raleigh, Greensboro and Wilmington, and 7 in Asheville and Fayetteville.

Ronald Hocutt, Director of the Highway Safety Division, said indications are that the October toll will be high and may bring the 10-month total for this year up to the 1940 12-month total of 989.
