It's Your Red Cross

The annual Roll Call of the Red Cross offers Americans an opportunity to become associated with an organization that serves human beings in their direst need.

Whether in war, or in peace, the stricken are aided. It is an amazing undertaking, made possible because average Americans, like those of us in Perquimans County, contribute relatively small sums to keep the work going.

Naturally, at this time the war work of the Red Cross receives much attention. Thousands of volunteer workers, all over the United States, are busy preparing garments and bandages to be used by those afflicted by the grim spectre of war. Others serve as the ministering hands to carry aid to suffering individuals.

It is not permitted for us all to do the actual work of the Red Cross, whether in war or in peace, but it is our privilege to take part in the labor of mercy by providing our share of the money that is necessary in the continuance of this great service to mankind.

Mr. Churchill And Messrs. Lloyd

Prime Minister Churchill lifted only the edge of official silence which veils the Admiralty's record of the battle for safe ship-lanes. The barest details were disclosed to the House of Commons. The members know, after weeks of waiting, that almost 1,000,000 tons of Axis shipping has been sunk or seriously damaged in the past four months. British shipping losses which in June were at the rate of nearly half a million tons monthly, now have been cut to 180,000 tons monthly.

None of the reasons for this piecemeal victory were given. Mr. Churchill did not stress, for instance, the probability that R. A. F. bombings have driven much Nazi transportation from battered rail lines to even riskier coastwise shipping along the Channel and North Sea shores. He did not reveal the story of constant Mediterranean patrolling by the Royal Navy in search of North Africa-bound Axis convoys escorted by Italy's fly-by-night navy.

Mr. Churchill faced a Commons criticism of present government efforts and clamoring for action to help Russia against the Nazis. He could be expected under such circumstances to make maximum use of the facts to meet the political needs. But his encouraging disclosures were given strong support in the announcement made the same day by Lloyds' shipping agent that war-risk insurance rates on Atlantic crossings have been reduced by 25 percent.

Neither politics nor morale plays a dominant role on the floor of the

The president offered a Thanksgiving Prayer. Mrs. William Tucker, accompanied by Mrs. R. G. Tucker, sang as a solo, "Count Your Blessings." After the business session, Miss Maness gave an interesting talk on bookcases; the different cases that could be had at small expense and the placing of them with books and magazines at convenient places in the home.

During the social hour the club members wrote a Thanksgiving poem, each one reading her poem to decide famous Lloyds. The renewal of confidence by these case-hardened experts whose very livelihood hangs on their accurate assessment of the chances of a ship's "coming through" is strong eulogy of British victories on the seas.—The Christian Science Monitor.
