Farmers Make Great Progress

There are individuals in Perquimans County who do not realize that agriculture has made tremendous progress but they will be better informed if they ponder figures recently released by the National Bureau of Economic Research, which has concluded a three year study of farm production.

One hundred years ago two out of every three Americans were employed in farming. In 1880 the percentage dropped to one out of two and in 1940 it was only one out of six of the working population.

The production of farms, however, shows no corresponding decline. Farm output increased steadily from 1899 to 1930, and after falling sharply during the drought years 1933-34, rose rapidly again and now stands higher than ever before.

In recent years, says Dr. Harold Barger and Hans Lansberg, authors of the study, farm output per worker has risen steadily, particularly in the raising of staple crops, due to the use of gasoline on the farm more than to any other single factor. They point out that there are nearly two million tractors on our farms.

The farm labor force in 1939 was 16 per cent smaller than in 1940 and 20 per cent smaller than in 1920. Yet, in recent years, before war-intensified production, farm output was 60 per cent more than in 1940 and 30 per cent more than in 1920.

War Effort Means Casualties

There will be increasing war activity in the remaining months of 1943. Prime Minister Churchill says that plans matured at Casablanca will be carried out "during the next nine months" and President Roosevelt promises actual invasion of the Continent of Europe.

Let no American imagine that these great blows will be made without loss of American lives. The overthrow of the Axis nations can be accomplished only by the destruction of their military power and this means the killing of their soldiers. It is not going to be an easy parade.

The President admits that "the amazing Russian armies in the East have been delivering overpowering blows" and adds, "we must do likewise in the West."

In the Far East the United Nations have no idea of "inching our way forward from island to island across the vast expanse of the Pacific," asserts the President, who adds, "There are many roads which lead right to Tokyo. We shall neglect none of them."

This may be interpreted in the light of his statement that "great and decisive actions against the Japanese will be taken to drive the invader from the soil of China." Moreover, "Important action will be taken in the skies over China—and over Japan itself."

Like Mr. Churchill, the President exuded confidence as to the final results. He looked ahead to complete victory—"to the day when United Nations' forces march in triumph through the streets of Berlin, Rome and Tokyo."

Admitting that the enemy has strong forces in strong positions in Tunisia and that the impending battle will cost us heavily in casualties, Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that Hitler is willing to pay the cost of an engagement in Tunisia because he knows that it will be followed by actual invasions, designed to make the pressure on Germany and Italy "constant and unrelenting."

Bolting Turkey's Back Door

Freeing Turkey's hands, as reflected in Mr. Churchill's very military-looking mission to that country, and in the more recent signing of a Russo-Turkish accord, is a result of United Nations gains on two sides of Turkey. General Montgomery's 1,500-mile game of hare-and-hounds with General Rommel relieved Turkey of having to look directly across the Mediterranean at formidable Axis forces. The Russian gains in the Caucasus relieved the Turks of a feeling of being jostled from behind by the Nazis.

The Russian contribution to fresh air for Turkey is of special interest at this time because it enables Turkey to contemplate eventual military cooperation with the United Nations without exposing the country to a stab in the back through the Caucasus. Turkey may one day become a springboard into Nazi Europe; the best insurance the Nazis could have obtained against this possibility would have been a strong hold on the Caucasus.

A great deal has been written about the traditional enmity between Turkey and Russia. A more realistic approach to Russo-Turkish relations in these times, however, is provided by a study of the revolutions that transformed them. Though their revolutions were not similar, yet a feeling of sympathy developed between the Russian and Turkish peoples who were both trying to free themselves of a darker past.

The Soviet Union was the first country to recognize the Turkish Republic. And the present situation can hardly be different for the Turks than for other peoples—that the existence of Nazis in the world makes good friends better friends.—Christian Science Monitor.
