"ALL GOD'S CHILLUN GOT SHOES"

Shoe leather was running short. The Army must have plenty of good stout shoes for its four and a half million men. A certain number of shoes must go overseas in lend-lease shipments. So shoes for civilians were suddenly, drastically rationed!

It may inconvenience some people who are used to a great variety of shoes to only have 3 pairs a year. It won't bother most of us very much—and what if it does? This rationing, as the old Negro spiritual says, means that "all God's chillun got shoes." Even with shoe output cut down from 450 million to 333 million, there'll be enough shoes made in the U. S. A. in 1943 for all of us to be well and comfortably shod.

That's because American shoes are so well made that three pairs are enough to see us through 12 months of activity. Some of the shoddy shoes that are made abroad wouldn't be able to "take it." But American shoes have always been wonderful. They're a typical product of American industry. The men and women who make things in this country have never stood still and been content to do things in the same old way. They've developed constantly new and better ways of making things. They've improved manufacturing processes so that prices could be reduced at no sacrifice in quality.

This characteristic of private enterprise has meant not only durable beautiful shoes but smart, well-cut dresses and coats, efficient refrigerators and stoves, good radios, wonderful automobiles, and that sense of well-being and confidence that good material things bring.

Right now everybody agrees that the war must come first no matter what happens. But let's remember that every day manufacturers are developing new materials, working out new processes, and finding easier ways to do things. After the war these improvements can be applied to multitudes of peacetime products, curtailed for the duration. When that happens "all God's chillun" can have lots of shoes.

How did George break his leg? Well, do you see those steps over there? Yes. Well, George didn't.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

RAISING LAZARUS

International Sunday School Lesson for February 28, 1943

GOLDEN TEXT: "I am the resurrection and the life."
(Lesson Text: John 11:32-44)

Our lesson this week relates the last miracle performed by Jesus before his crucifixion. It did not come about spontaneously, from extraordinary circumstances, but was apparently decided upon by Jesus four days before the event took place.

Three times during his ministry Jesus restored life to those who had died. The son of the widow of Nain and the daughter of the ruler of the Capernaum synagogue, Jairus, were the first two of such miracles. The first is reported by Luke and the latter by all three synoptic gospels. The resurrection of Lazarus is reported only by John.

Jesus often visited the home in Bethany, where the sisters Martha and Mary and the brother Lazarus lived. Martha is pictured to us elsewhere as the practical housekeeper, while her younger sister, Mary, was of a more spiritual nature.

The family seemed to have been well-to-do and their home was a retreat time and again for Jesus. Here he found rest and recreation after the busy day and, quite naturally, was very close and dear to the three members of the household.

Jesus had been in Jerusalem a few weeks prior to the time of our present lesson, at the Feast of the Dedication, and the Jews had attempted to stone him then. To avoid the hostility Jesus had withdrawn into Perea and was east of the River Jordan when death overtook his friend Lazarus. Prior to his death, the two sisters sent a message to Jesus advising him of the serious illness of his friend. Notwithstanding, Jesus remained two days before starting for Bethany. When he arrived, Lazarus had been dead and four days in the grave.

No specific explanation is given for the deliberate action of Jesus in this connection. Some think he realized the effects which would follow the miracle which he would perform and, therefore, wanted those around Lazarus to realize without any doubt that death had taken place. The fact that this would cause sorrow to his sisters and friends was insignificant with the greater happiness and faith which would result from the miraculous return to life. It is also likely that Jesus employed these two days in thinking out the problem presented—whether or not to resurrect his friend and thus hasten his own death.

At length, Jesus announced to his disciples that he was going back to Judea. This brought consternation to them because they realized the danger which had attended his last appearance, but Jesus replied to their warnings with the question, "Are there not twelve hours in the day?" Thomas, who was later to receive the title of doubter, voiced a great courage, in the face of danger, and said to the others, "Let us also go, that we may die with him." So, the journey to Bethany was begun.

Martha met Jesus first, voicing a complaint that her brother would not have died if Jesus had come, but at the same time expressing a faith in his power, although Lazarus had been dead these four days.

In the course of his talk with Martha, Jesus spoke the sentence which has so often comforted those who mourn, "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." Soon afterward the other sister, Mary, came to Jesus, attended by the Jews who were making loud lamentation.

Jesus was moved with indignation, either at the hypocritical sorrow of the attendants, or because he realized the suffering and distress which came with death, also an enemy to mankind which he had come to overthrow.

Proceeding to the tomb, Jesus gave thanks to God in words indicating his own conviction that his prayers to bring Lazarus back had been definitely answered before the event and explaining that he expressed them to increase the faith of those about him. Then, in response to the command of Jesus, Lazarus came forth from the tomb.

Some of the Jews who witnessed the miracle believed in Jesus but others reported the event to his religious enemies in Jerusalem. The Sanhedrin met to consider the possibility that this worker of miracles was destroying their religious leadership and power and to preserve their own authority, decided he should die. To avoid them, Jesus went back into retirement until the Feast of the Passover. While his enemies looked for him, they wondered if he would come to Jerusalem for the Feast.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.
