

Revival Closes At Methodist Church

A successful series of revival services came to a close at the First Methodist Church in Hertford last Sunday night. The pastor, the Rev. B. C. Reavis, did the preaching and the interest and attendance was good throughout the entire meeting which reached a splendid climax in the closing service.

This is "Bible Week" in all Christian churches and as an appropriate conclusion to the week Mr. Reavis will use "Finding the Lost Book," as the sermon subject next Sunday at 11 a. m. Second Chronicles 34:14 will be used as the text.

At the morning service there will be a reception of members into the church, both on profession of faith and by certificate. Any wishing to unite with the church either on profession of faith or by certificate and have not already given their name to Mr. Reavis are urged to do so between now and time for the service next Sunday morning.

There are only three more Sundays between now and the meeting of the annual conference of the Methodist Church at Rocky Mount on November 2.

Public Opinion Effective Cox Quits House Inquiry
The resignation of Representative Eugene Cox, as Chairman and Member of a House Committee investigating the Federal Communications Commission, brings to an end a spectacle which was not calculated to enhance the prestige of Congress.

tion revolved around a check for $2,500 which the Commission alleged Mr. Cox received from a radio station in Georgia. The question was raised whether the check represented payment for services in connection with an application filed with the Commission.

In view of the fact that members of Congress are prohibited from accepting fees for appearing before governmental agencies the Commission turned over the check and other evidence to the Department of Justice.

There is no need to attempt to pass judgment upon the charge involving the check which Representative Cox, who charged the Commission with having "the nastiest nest of rats" in the country. Chairman Fly was charged with seeking a censorship over communications. Mr. Cox was appointed head of a five-man committee to conduct the investigation.

In view of the situation outlined above and especially the investigation of the $2,500 check, it was obviously improper for Mr. Cox to serve as a member of the investigating committee and direct the inquiry.

Moreover, the methods and procedure of the Committee plainly indicated an entire absence of a judicial frame of mind. Hearings were scheduled and conducted so as to secure publicity for charges against the Commission without permitting it to make any reply.

The peculiar situation was brought to the attention of the House in May, when Commissioner Clifford J. Durr filed a petition requesting that Representative Cox be disqualified as chairman.

The House Judiciary Committee declared that it was without authority and Mr. Durr requested the speaker to place his petition before the entire House. Before this was done, however, Mr. Cox resigned.

We chronicle the matter somewhat fully because it is of tremendous importance. Both houses of Congress have developed a tendency to use investigating committees as engines of persecution, with little or no effort to carry out anything like a judicial investigation.

Federal departments, officials, and, at times, private citizens have suffered unjustly because, very often, charges made against them received much greater publicity than their explanations and defense.

This is the first time, so far as we know, that a member of a committee of Congress, engaged in an investigation, has resigned under the pressure of public opinion. There was general approval of the position of the FCC that a committee, investigating its operations, should be composed of Congressmen, who, without question, were unbiased and unprejudiced.

Place Orders Now For 1944 Nitrogen

Peach and apple growers should be thinking now of their requirements for nitrogen fertilizer in 1944, say Extension horticulturists at State College. They advise placing orders with fertilizer dealers now for the amount growers estimate they will need next year.

There are only limited supplies of nitrate of soda and cyanamide for use, and sulphate of ammonia will not be available at all for fruit growers next season. A considerable quantity of ammonium nitrate, however, will be released for direct application to orchard trees.

With these fertilizer limitations, the horticulturists say it is especially important that every fruit grower use nitrogen fertilizers in the most efficient way. They say, don't waste fertilizer by using only one-half as much as each tree needs. "Efficient use" means applying enough to produce good growth, fruit set and yield.

They also advise fruit growers to consider full applications. Experiments have shown that when nitrogen is applied in the fall, the roots take it up and store it in parts of the tree where it becomes available as the tree grows.

Also, the War Production Board has allotted material for 80 percent more power sprays and parts than in 1941 or 1942. But if growers wait until spring to place their orders for additional equipment, it may be too late, so immediately after harvest, the horticulturists say growers should look over their sprayer outfit and place their orders for needed parts with the WPB.

Furniture On Truck Burns; Bonds Saved

A truck loaded with furniture, driven by an unidentified resident of Pamlico County, was destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon on route 17, just north of the causeway. The fire was caused by the driver throwing away a cigarette, which lighted the furniture.

On discovery of the fire, the truck was stopped and the Hertford Fire Department was called to the scene. The blaze had destroyed most of the furniture, but the firemen saved a cedar chest which contained $1,800 worth of war bonds.

Annual Food Loss Cuts Into Supply

Analytical studies of garbage collected in 247 cities show that American garbage contains an average waste of three-fourths of a pound of food for each person every day, say home economists with the State College Extension Service.

Many food losses naturally occur in the transportation of food to market by truck, boat or train. Then when the food reaches the retail stores it may be wasted by careless handling or pinching fruit and vegetables to see if they are ripe. And in restaurants and public eating places, a tremendous waste occurs.

However, it is in the home that the home economists want to cut wastes most. They quote figures from the findings of government nutritionists to support their contention.

If each home wasted one slice of bread per week, the total would amount to approximately two million loaves a week. About one-fourth of the food in garbage cans consists of green vegetables, this shows that American homemakers should learn to prepare vegetables with the same skill they prepare desserts and meats, say the home economists.

Little dabs of butter left on plates add up. The rules of good etiquette prevent Americans from getting the last piece of meat on the bone, tipping their soup bowls or sopping up their gravy with a piece of bread. Throwing away the peel from around potatoes throws away valuable vitamins and food qualities needed in the diet, and squeezing the grapefruit dry not only saves food but gives one vitamin C he needs, say the specialists.

If no more than a quarter or a third of the 20 to 30 percent of the food supply that is now lost between harvest and the garbage pail can be eliminated, the home economists feel that we will have done much towards relieving the food shortage.

Limited Amount Of Seed For Sale

On the basis of favorable reports by farmers who have grown the new blackshank resistant tobacco, a limited supply of seed is available from different growers and perhaps from the Tobacco Branch Station at Oxford.

E. G. Moss, assistant director in charge of the Oxford Tobacco Station, says T. M. Lewis of Walnut Cove, Route 2, has been growing this tobacco on his farm for the Experiment Station for the past ten years. This year he grew enough to supply some seed for the immediate demand only.

Last year, the Oxford station released 100 pounds of the seed to Rockingham, Guilford and Forsyth county farmers to be grown by them as a field demonstration. The majority of the growers were well pleased with its resistance, yield and quality, Moss says.

Any grower who would like further information on the performance of this tobacco may write his county agent in any of the sections in which it has been grown and ask to be put in touch with one of the farmers who has raised it as part of the experiment.

These agents are: Fred Walker, Reidsville; E. W. Pou, Winston-Salem; or J. L. Waggoner, Greensboro. The new tobacco strain gave from 80 to 100 percent control of the black shank disease in these counties.
