Census Information To Be Widely Used

The information on crops and livestock to be gathered by the 1945 Agricultural Census in January will be used in many ways by farmers and by varied groups from Federal agencies to manufacturers and advertising organizations.

Dean I. O. Schaub of State College, who heads an advisory council of all agricultural agencies cooperating with the Census Bureau, urges that farmers give just as complete information as possible. He points out that the information collected from growers is strictly confidential and will not be used for taxation or regulation.

When all of the information is classified and published, it will present an invaluable digest of agricultural facts. Cooperative farm associations can use it as a guide to intelligent credit and as a basis for marketing plans. Individual farmers will know better how to make acreage changes in crops and regulate the number of their livestock.

The agricultural census will provide basic information for dealers in agricultural products, railroads, insurance companies, manufacturers, advertising agencies, marketing organizations, experiment station and extension workers, and such agencies as the Farm Credit Administration and Soil Conservation.

In times of disaster, the agricultural census will provide much of the information needed for drought relief, seed loans and other rural relief agencies.

"Agriculture will be able to make much greater progress in the future, if we have full information at hand on which to make our plan," Dean Schaub said. "We especially need all the facts in the case as we face changing conditions after the war."

Get Soybean Seed For 1945 Planting

Farmers who plan to plant soybeans in 1945 will do well to get their seed now, if they do not already have them on hand, says Enos Blair, Extension agronomist at State College.

He explains that late planted soybeans in Eastern Carolina were severely damaged by insects and that the total crop has been materially reduced. Many fields in this area were not harvested because they were almost a total loss.

Blair recommends Ogden, Volstate and Arksoy among the newly grown varieties that are suitable for both hay and seed. The leading varieties on which growers have learned to depend are Tokio, Wood's Yellow, Mammoth Yellow and Haberlandt.

Seed of such special hay varieties as Laredo, Oototan and Virginia are much scarcer than the general purpose varieties.

"The Biloxi, while too coarse for hay, is still an outstanding variety to plant in corn for soil improvement and to use for grazing," Blair says.
