

SCOUTING VIGNETTES

By Peter Carlton

It is not an infrequent occurrence that accidents occur which might have been prevented were the victims trained in self-preservation, or emergency crews trained to be ever in readiness.

The Boy Scouts have an Emergency Service Corps which is described in the booklet entitled "A Guide For Emergency Service Trainers and Leaders." Emphasis is placed upon the fact that the Emergency Service Training Plan is one in which all Scouts of any age may take part.

Dr. James E. West, former Chief Scout Executive and editor of Boys' Life, speaks of the program as "an intensification and application of the same Boy Scout program which, over a period of more than 31 years, has shown itself to be an excellent builder of boys into young men of good character, trained for citizenship. Our literature, including the Handbooks and Scouting Magazine, are full of the skills needed by Scouts and methods for using them, in emergency service."

Disaster itself, it is pointed out in this booklet mentioned in the early part of this article, is in the main, the task of adults, however, the Boy Scouts of America recognize the American National Red Cross, community, county, State and Federal responsibility in time of disaster and desire to cooperate as it has in the past. So far it has been found that this cooperation was welcomed.

In carrying out the Emergency Service Program, local Councils will work with and through the "Committee on Disaster Preparedness and Relief" of the appropriate Red Cross chapter. In cooperating in matters of government (community, county, State) responsibility, local Scout Councils will work with and through the appropriate government authorities. It is not intended to compete with nor duplicate the work of these organizations empowered by the local or national government with the responsibility of leadership.

Lawn Mowers—Prewar Versus Postwar

Will Curry isn't falling for those pictures of a postwar life of ease. He is sweating over his lawn mower the other day, when somebody shows him pictures of a mower that runs under its own power.

"Shucks," says Will, "I like a lawn mower that gives you some backtalk and exercise. It gets the old blood circulating and works up a wonderful thirst. Then," Will adds with zest, "there's nothing in the whole world that is as cheerful as a cheerful glass of beer."

From where I sit, there's a lot of good sense in what Will says. A little honest effort never hurt anybody. And there should be more to our post-war plans than how to make life comfortable and easy.

Outdoor work—work you do with your hands and your back—ought to be part of everybody's post-war plans. And on a hot day, as Will says, there's always that sparkling glass of beer as a reward.

Come Back Home Jobs Are Waiting

A LOT of our patriotic neighbors left home to serve their country, either in the armed services or in war industries.

If you are one of them, we want you to know there is a warm welcome and a job waiting for you here.

We hope you will come back to make your home here among your old friends and neighbors. This is a good town with a lot of fine people—and a fine future.

Plenty of Jobs Here

In addition to the opportunities here with which you are familiar, some new ones have developed during the war. For instance, a lot of people around here have been making good money, working in pulpwood. The tremendous war-time demand for pulpwood will continue because of the civilian demand that has been piling up and the many new industrial uses that have been discovered. Pulpwood has no conversion problem.

And that is typical of most of our business here. It runs along pretty steadily—no big ups and downs. You can enjoy security here and a nice way of living that doesn't cost every penny you make.

So come on back home to stay! We'll be mighty glad and proud to have you with us again.

Cut this out. Mail it to somebody you want to come back home
