Here is a letter from a farmer about an experience he had with natural soda on his corn. It is offered here in the hope that you will find his suggestion helpful and profitable.

The Farmer's Forum
from Uncle Natchel's Book of Experience

"On a field of corn where I had a good stand, I sidedressed it with 250 lbs. per acre of Chilean Nitrate when the corn was knee high. Just to see what would happen, I doubled the sidedressing on a few rows and on the next rows left it off altogether. When we checked up on the results, I found that the corn that had not gotten any soda had fired above the ears; that which got the 250 pounds showed a little firing, while the corn that got double, had not fired at all. I used to think that firing was caused by dry weather but now I believe it really is hunger for nitrate."
