

SOIL CONSERVATION NOTES

R. L. Hendren is planning to improve the drainage on his farm which adjoins the White Millpond main canal. The Soil Conservation Service technicians working with the Albemarle Soil Conservation District surveyed the ditches for Mr. Hendren and will stake them for grade.

Arvine Hudson in the Old Neck community set some kudzu plants around a gully in his field to help control the erosion. These plants were obtained by the district from one of the Soil Conservation Service nurseries.

Murden Stokely in the White Hat community recently cut a ditch to drain some water from the back of his field.

Soil samples were taken last week for Watson E. Russell, J. A. Russell, J. G. Turner, James Stokely and Clarence Burke on land where they plan to seed to permanent pasture this fall.

more complicated by dependence upon commercialized amusement for pleasure, upon going somewhere for thrills, upon needed luxuries which made him "soft".

At the same time, this trend is being increasingly aided by business which profits by our abandonment of the simple life, especially the powerful amusement, tobacco and liquor businesses. The simple truth is that these interests and those who share in their vast profits have succeeded all too well in luring Mr. and Mrs. America away from the simple life.

Contrary to all beliefs, the simple life is not drab and colorless, it is not unsocial and miserly living. It is rather living life according to the true nature of life as one has come to know it. This means eating food which one knows to be best for his body and drinking and eating nothing which he knows to be valueless or hurtful. It means the cultivation of the ability to enjoy God's world—the flowers, trees, birds, sky, people and homes. It means the committal of life to a worthy purpose, living wholesomely, helpfully and lovingly, using one's influence for the betterment of those with whom one comes in contact.

A word or a nod from the good has more weight than the eloquent speeches of others.
—Plutarch.

A GREAT NEWSPAPER BACKS FORMER GOVERNOR J. MELVILLE BROUGHTON

FOR THE UNITED STATES SENATE

Editorial from the Wilmington (N. C.) Sunday Star-News

"LET THE PEOPLE CHOOSE"

The best of all indicators of what may be expected of a man seeking a great responsibility is his past record in a comparable position.

As the candidates go before the people of North Carolina in the current political campaign, the thought expressed most often about this or that one is in the form of a question—What has he done to prove that he is capable of the new role he seeks in public service?

And of all before those voters today, none has a better answer than J. Melville Broughton, North Carolina's war-time governor who is now a candidate for nomination to the United States Senate in the May 29 Democratic primary.

That answer is in the form of a record of progressive public service unsurpassed in North Carolina in recent years. Now is an appropriate time to review it briefly. As we do, twelve outstanding achievements highlight his administration as the state's Chief Executive from January 7, 1941 to January 4, 1945, one of the most critical periods in the state's modern life.

These accomplishments, in which every citizen benefited, are:

Enactment of teacher and state employee retirement law; Legislation adding 12th grade to the public school system; Nine month school law; State aid to public libraries; Reorganization of state hospitals and correctional institutions under consolidated boards; removal of sales tax from all food for home consumption; enlarged appropriations for agricultural experiment and research; notable expansion of the schools of dairying and agriculture and the textile and engineering schools at N. C. State College; establishment of the first State vocational school in the history of the state, being the textile school in Gaston County; inaugurated broad program of mineral research and development of mineral resources; organization of Civilian Defense program during the war, and launching of movement for broad medical care and hospital program and appointment of commission to recommend appropriate legislation, which recommendations were later enacted into law.

For an administration to have done so much for its state in a four-year period means that its leader was not only keenly aware of the varied and numerous needs of the people, but had the outstanding ability to do something about fulfilling them. It is most difficult to recall a North Carolinian better informed than Mr. Broughton on the state's people, their problems and, most important, their future destiny in one of the great commonwealths of the republic.

His return to the role of private citizen has not diminished his forceful interest in his state.

The past years have seen him using his fine talents and valuable time in behalf of expansion of industry, development of state ports, betterment of agriculture and numerous other concerted programs to improve all North Carolina.

His campaign, conducted with all the dignity befitting the office he seeks, is based on one theme—Let the people choose.

"The people of the state will determine whether or not my experience and service as Governor, legislator and in other public capacities qualify me to serve as their representative in the Senate of the United States," Mr. Broughton said in his original announcement. "My campaign will be addressed to the people. Gubernatorial appointment, under the statute, has filled the temporary vacancy caused by death; but only the people by their votes can decide who will represent them in the Senate for the full term.

"If I am nominated and elected, as I confidently expect to be, I will owe no allegiance except to the people. To their service and to the national welfare I will dedicate all the energy and ability that I possess."

On the basis of his outstanding four-year record in the state's highest office, his continuous, intense interest in the state's whole welfare and his ability and determination to serve with distinction in the world's greatest parliamentary body, we believe the people of North Carolina will choose J. Melville Broughton as their next U. S. Senator.

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.
You may suffer nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination, with smearing and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.
