

Hunters Are Urged To Practice Safety

"When you're hunting, sportsmanship and safety may save a life—and that life may be your own," I. C. Yagel, County Agent for the State College Extension Service, declares.

"Hunting is one of the nation's healthiest and most pleasant sports," Mr. Yagel said. "Thousands will join the ranks of game hunters during the approaching season. If you are one of them, remember that it pays to play safe."

According to the National Safety Council, three causes lead to almost two-thirds of the accidents reported during the hunting season. They are: Human beings in line of fire, mistaking another hunter for game, and hunting with the safety catch off.

The good sportsman, declared the county agent, uses common sense in handling guns and shows consideration for others. He uses the right gun for the right game, hunts only in season, and does not take the limit unless he can use the meat or trophies. For bird hunting, he takes a trained dog to retrieve cripples. He puts out cigarettes carefully and breaks matches before dropping them.

The "ten commandments of safety" which are followed by all good hunters are:

- Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun.
- Carry only empty guns, taken down or with the action open, into your auto, camp and home.
- Always be sure that the barrel and action are clear of obstructions.
- Always carry your gun so that you can control the direction of the muzzle, even if you stumble.
- Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger.
- Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot.
- Never leave your gun unattended unless you unload it first.
- Never climb a tree or a fence with a loaded gun.
- Never shoot at a flat, hard surface or the surface of water.
- Don't mix gunpowder with alcohol.

Modern Treatment Of Tuberculosis

In recent years a great crusade has been going on to wipe out pulmonary tuberculosis. Sanitariums and hospitals have been established for its treatment by states, counties and private individuals.

Campaigns for the education of the public and the raising of funds for the care of the sick and their rehabilitation are constantly carried on. Communities are organized to fight the disease. They are led by trained workers, physicians, nurses and public spirited citizens. Tuberculosis is decreasing and the mortality rate has gone down.

Many physicians have devoted their lives to the study of tuberculosis and to the care of its victims. New procedures have been instituted whereby much comfort has been brought to the sufferers. Not only have they suffered less, but the time taken for restoration has been greatly shortened.

Surgery plays a large part in saving the lives of the tubercular. Chest surgery is now highly specialized. You know that tuberculosis is caused by a germ called the tubercle bacillus.

This germ may affect any organ of the body, but it is most common in the lungs.

The symptoms may be slight hacking cough with or without expectoration. There is loss of appetite and of weight, accompanied by chills and fever. Some cases resemble pneumonia with prostration and high fever. An X-ray examination of the lungs will reveal characteristics of tuberculosis. A microscopic examination of the sputum may reveal the bacilli of tuberculosis.

The recovery may depend in a large measure upon the natural resistance of the patient, and how well he cooperates. The treatment consists of complete rest in bed, fresh air and a high caloric and nutritious diet.

As a rule it is not hard to arrest the disease in its incipency. Neglected, it passes from moderate to advanced stages. Each is more difficult to treat until finally death comes and releases the sufferer.

The old name for tuberculosis was consumption which described it. Untreated, the lung hollows out and leaves cavities. Symptoms continue as long as cavities exist. The sputum also continues to contain the very contagious bacilli. The patient is a carrier and a menace to the community.

If he is ever cured, the TB specialists must take over. They look at the case from every angle and decide to resort to surgery. Here is where the thoracic surgeon must come in. He may be called upon to close a tubercular cavity which will render the sputum negative and the patient will cease to cough.

Variety Of Foods Is Now Available

The November horn of plenty will pour forth an abundant variety of menu-building foods—a variety sufficient to make every meal a budget-saver—Miss Nina Braswell, home demonstration agent for the State College Extension Service, says.

In announcing the U. S. Department of Agriculture's list of foods expected to be plentiful supply this month, Miss Braswell pointed out that it is topped by cranberries, southern-grown pecans, and fresh carrots.

Other November plentifuls, she said, will include oranges, grapefruit, lemons, grapes, winter pears, canned grapefruit segments, canned applesauce and apple juice, prunes, raisins, dried figs, cabbage, Irish potatoes, onions fruit spreads, peanut butter, honey, fresh and frozen fish, and oat products.

The USDA, Miss Braswell said, issues its list of "plentifuls of the month" as a means of aiding homemakers in shopping wisely and economically, since the foods in most plentiful supply are often those moderately priced.

Problem Of Buying Farms Is Discussed

Some common-sense ideas on the business of farming were brought out in a round-table discussion by Negro farmers of the Washington High School community recently, reports T. D. Williamson, Rockingham County Negro farm agent for the State College Extension Service.

Thirty-seven farmers attended the meeting, which was held for the purpose of discussing major problems in connection with buying farms. The following conclusions were reached by the group:

1. Farmers can make much higher incomes in productive areas than in poor sections; so they need to find out whether the community is prosperous before they buy a farm.
2. Buyers are more likely to pay too much for a poor farm than for a good one because the difference in earning capacity is wider than they think.
3. Families on good farms usually pay off their mortgages but many fall in poor areas.
4. Buying a farm "on a shoe-string" is risky in any case, but the poorer the farm the greater the risk. The bigger the down payment, the safer the investment.
5. A family that does not have much capital can usually make more money as tenants on a good farm than as owners of a poor farm.
6. Most mortgage troubles grow out of buying a farm at too high a price and then trying to pay for it after prices of farm products have fallen.

nation. "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away: blessed be the name of the Lord."

Again there was a council in heaven. Satan, compelled to admit his defeat, suggested another method of attack, stating that if Job's body was affected, then, for sure, he would renounce God. God permitted Satan to go forth and do what he would to Job's body, with the only limit that he spare his life. As a result, Job was afflicted with sore boils from the sole of his feet to the crown of his head.

It was a terrible affliction, so repulsive to those around him that Job sought refuge outside the village upon the head of ashes. Keen as this trial was, however, Job held fast his integrity; even though his wife advised him to renounce God and die. As before, Job recognized God's right to take away as well as to give and admits it to be a man's duty to accept evil from God as well as good. Job, in this story, stands as the representatives of all mankind caught in the toils of sin, hounded by Satan, but helped by the power of God. The glory of Job is found in the manner in which he met the test. He was true in spite of calamity, faithful in spite of confusion and ignorance, and victorious through surrender. His faith enabled him to see the hand of God in his own life, to recognize the ultimate defeat of evil and the victory of good so that he could say, "When he hath tried me, shall come forth as gold."
