

Our County and Social Security

"That story, Mr. D'Auteuil, certainly points out the need for older workers to stop a moment and find out about their old-age insurance rights." Thus expressed your editor after our conversation about the case in which benefits were lost.

When a man makes a will, he tells The case was about an old furniture worker, who was not only self-reliant but proud of his good health at age 67. His pride lost him social security benefits. This old fellow had worked 50 years in his trade. He had been able to pay for his home and to put something aside for his old age. One day he began to have dizzy spells. At first he was able to work the better part of the day, but finally he reached the point where it was a tremendous effort for him to even get out of bed.

Finally he had to stop altogether. He felt that since he had never been sick a day in his life before this, that he'd soon get better and could go back to work. He, also, felt that if he filed for his old-age benefits, it would mean that he wasn't going to get better and wouldn't be able to go back to work. He didn't understand the provisions of his benefit rights under Old-Age and Survivors Insurance.

After not working for six months, his employer told him that he should visit our office and get his benefits. Well, he came in, but still fighting proud, said he would take his Old-Age payments temporarily. It's too bad he didn't come in right away when he got sick and file an application then. He would have gotten a payment for every month he didn't work. His wife, also 65, would have received payments for each month in which he did.

USDA Says 83.6% Of N. C. Farms Electrified

Electrification of farms in North Carolina took a substantial upswing in 1948-49, resulting in this State for the first time topping the national percentage of electrified farms, according to data received in Raleigh from the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

North Carolina's percentage of farms with electricity jumped from 68.3 on June 30, 1948, to 83.6 on June 30, 1949. In the entire U. S. only 78.2 per cent of the farms are electrified. Nineteen of the states are below the U. S. average, and 23 states top North Carolina's standing.

In announcing the new data, the USDA said: "Experience indicates that as the electrification of rural America progresses, the job of reaching the remaining unserved farms becomes more difficult."

In every section of the world there are good men and women, anxious to live at peace and to help their neighbors. Why doesn't somebody organize them and put the bee on the evildoers?
