Union Of Free Peoples

A resolution, now under consideration by the Congress of the United States, provides that the President of the United States invite the democracies that sponsor the North Atlantic Treaty to name delegates, to meet this year "to explore how far their peoples, and the peoples of such other democracies as the convention may invite to send delegates, can supply among them within the framework of the United Nations, the principle of free federal union."

It might be a good idea for the readers of the Perquimans Weekly to know something about this resolution. It is sponsored by the Atlantic Union Committee, headed by former Justice Owen J. Roberts, of the U. S. Supreme Court, assisted by an outstanding group of eminent Americans, including Clarence Streit, author of "Union Now," which stated some years ago, the principles upon which a free federal union should be formulated.

The reader should understand that the proposal does not include all the nations of the world. It would invite the law-abiding, peace-loving nations, whose peoples seem to believe in the same fundamental things. The United States, the British Commonwealth, the Scandinavian countries, Belgium, Holland, France and Switzerland comprise those embraced in the invitation. In these countries there is a free press, free speech, free assembly and freedom to own property. The governments have been elected by the free vote of their peoples. Individual rights are respected and protected.

There are some who advocate a union of all the nations of the earth, but the most practical scheme seems to be a beginning confined to the Atlantic democracies.

If we realize that there are more than two billion people in the world and that the free democracies contain only about three hundred million, we see immediately that a world federation, including all nations, with representation on a population basis, would leave the freedom-loving nations hopelessly outnumbered.

The free democracies would have about fifteen per cent of the representatives and the United States about seven per cent. It is easy to conclude that, under such conditions, the ideals of the union would be dominated by the non-democratic representatives.

These figures as to population should not lead anyone to believe that the union of the democracies would be weak and impotent. They control over eighty per cent of the world's industrial and productive power. United, they would possess probably the strongest power ever seen in the world and no aggressors or combination of aggressors would likely court disaster by inviting a conflict with a union representing and protecting the rights and liberties of free peoples.

In view of the fact that the people of this country are conscious of a dangerous situation in world affairs, with Soviet Union in possession of the atomic bomb and participating in something like an arms race with the United States, it would seem to be an intelligent move to bring about a union of democratic peoples before the outbreak of another war.

If these free nations attempt to stand apart from each other, they will invite a future aggressor to follow the tactics of a late enemy, who picked them off "one by one." Only in an efficiently working union can the strength of the democracies be combined and utilized to give reasonable assurance for the safety of all.

There are other advantages to be gained through a federation of free peoples. The prospect is that it would mean greater prosperity because of the close economic rapprochement would make mutually profitable trade easier than before and many of the impediments to the free flow of commerce and production could be abolished.

 "Now Miss," said the dentist, "which tooth is giving you all the trouble?"
 "Second from the left in the balcony," she replied.
