Good Seed For Crops

The farmers of Perquimans County are about to begin their new year. They will soon initiate the crops upon which they will depend for a living income. Into the uncertain lap of the weather and the market, they consign their fortune and the well-being of the families for which they labor.

It is not a very inviting prospect for farmers. What the future holds, in regard to yield, is hard to determine. What may be expected in the way of prices is also uncertain. There are risks that are inevitable but no unnecessary liability should be callously or wantonly added.

Too often a farmer plants his crop without considering the great importance of the seed. Heavy losses result every year, in every crop, from poor seed. Good seed is important. It is the good beginning which enables one farmer to outdo his neighbor. Good seed will mean good stands, healthy plants, with ability to live and grow and to withstand temporary setbacks.

We urge every farmer who reads this article to determine to plant only the best seed in the spring. This is one expenditure which will pay big dividends.

Appreciate Our Inheritance

Human beings, alive today in Perquimans County, should appreciate the inheritance that has come to them from men and women who have lived in the years that are gone. This may seem like a commonplace declaration but it involves an understanding acceptance of the institutions which have been bequeathed to us.

Those living today arrived in a world which had been developed by others. They enjoyed modern family life, churches, schools, governments and, be it added, an economic arrangement that makes for their comfortable living.

These things have not always been in the world. They have been slowly developed, often by the blood, as well as the sweat, of humanity. In casually accepting them and in carelessly misusing them, we exhibit a form of ignorance which is perilous to human progress.

As we comprehend in full the value of the gifts of our ancestors, we are apt to safeguard them. We would not willingly destroy in a day, or in a few years, the fruit of humanity's struggle through many centuries. Naturally, we benefit by what men have wrought before us and the only honorable course in life is to preserve these gifts for generations yet unborn.

Democracy Is Not The Way Of War

As the people of the United States gird themselves for the burden of creating and supporting an adequate defense force, they should understand that the ways of democracy are not the ways of war. Whenever a free people find themselves engaged in combat, or preparing for a possible attack, they must willingly surrender some of the privileges which belong to free men.

The cry is sometimes heard that any abrogation of the rights of the people means the end of liberty. This view is not supported by history because the people of this country have, in prior wars, relinquished some privileges in order to adequately meet a national emergency. When the job is finished, they readily reassert their power and once more enjoy full and unfettered freedom.

Before World War II, there was talk in this country of the death of democracy if the nation became engaged in war. The concentration of authority necessary to throw the full power of the nation into the conflict caused some augmentation of power in the hands of officials. The same thing was true in connection with World War I. However, when the crisis passed, there was a natural resurgence of individual freedom.

The people of this country, while devoted to the ideal of individual liberty, understand that they can delegate authority to officials for a limited time and for a particular purpose without endangering the permanence of their free institutions. Nevertheless, they should be alert, now as always, in order to safeguard the liberties that individuals cherish.
