President of the American Horticultural Council. He says that will happen unless "immediate and heroic measures are taken to save our remaining crop land and thus guarantee a continuing food supply for our growing population."

Calling attention to the loss of 100,000,000 acres to erosion and misuse, the doctor says that another 100,000,000 acres of the 560,000,000 acres acquired by our early settlers will be in the discard by 1960. In the meantime, "the population is rising at the rate of 2,200,000 a year."

Nutritionists estimate that it takes two and a half acres of crop land to provide a properly balanced diet for a single person and, therefore, the doctor says that the United States will arrive at a critical point in the next fifteen or twenty years. The world at large, of course, is in a worse condition than the United States but this is no consolation for the problem that we face.

The average American, including those who live in the rural sections, rarely stops to realize that the civilization of the world depends upon the top six inches of soil that enable mankind to raise crops. To stand idly by while this precious land is washed into the rivers and ocean by our disregard of rainfalls is carelessness of the worst type. Because of the latent danger, the Government has very wisely taken steps to encourage landowners to practice soil conservation and intelligent agriculturalists are more interested than ever in saving their soil.

You can't beat this bromide: "An honest man is the noblest work of God."

Be Sure To Vote

Monday is election day for residents of the Town of Hertford, and with nine candidates seeking the five offices to be filled by the election, it behooves each eligible voter to cast a ballot for the candidates of his choice.

The town's government is everybody's business, so everybody should be sufficiently interested to vote Monday and have a hand in electing the official town board for the next four years.

The polling place will be opened from 6:30 A. M., until 6:30 P. M., affording every voter an opportunity to take a few minutes during the day to cast his ballot.

The Mess Is Muddled

The first public reaction to the firing of General Douglas MacArthur has subsided but the public can rest assured that the press and radio will be filled with choice tidbits concerning the involuntary retirement for some days to come.

In fact, we are of the opinion that strenuous efforts will be made to keep this situation boiling so long as there remains an ounce of political bickering to be had from the mess which now has become muddled.

The firing of MacArthur, simply boiled down, was the action of a boss firing a hired hand, who no longer worked as the boss ordered. That in itself, is an every day occurrence happening in both business and government.

President Truman, in his nationwide radio address of last week, attempted to clarify the American position as it concerns the war in Korea, giving the American people an inside look at what part of the Government's foreign policy is working toward.

The speech, in itself, left much to be explained, it is very possible, and the American people should realize the situation, our Government attempting to be the bulwark of the world against Communism can not and will not reveal all of its plans to either allies or enemies.

Not A Good Sign

Preliminary figures from the Census Bureau indicate that the number of farms in the United States is growing smaller, which is not the sign of the prosperous agriculture necessary to the national well-being.

Let nobody be fooled about these figures. They mean that the smaller farmers are being ground to pieces in the battle of mechanization and high prices. It is not a good sign for the social welfare of the nation or North Carolina.

There is a growing tendency in this day and generation to forget the fundamental importance of the farmer in the welfare of the nation. It is to be expected that metropolitan residents, unfamiliar with the conditions that exist, get the idea that the government is coddling American farmers but it is somewhat tragic that some people in places like Hertford, have developed the same opinion.

With soil erosion cutting down the number of fertile acres in this country, it is vitally important that we maintain a strong and prosperous agriculture. It cannot be done if the people who grow our feeds, food and fibers are to be relegated to an inferior economic status. Moreover, one should not overlook the fact that agriculture today is an enterprise that requires capital and that it is no longer possible for anybody to make a living out of the soil without intelligent training and adequate equipment.

It might take a few years of semi famine to make the people of this country understand just how important agriculture is to the welfare of the nation and its people. We hope that no such tragedy looms ahead but, just because we have had bumper crops for years, there is no certainty that the same good fortune will continue indefinitely.
