Save Time

It is time now to plant collard seed—also tomato seed for the fall crop. These should be ready to transplant to the garden now by July 20-25. In Florida the Improved Grothen Globe variety is being recommended especially as a fall tomato. I have grown Grothen Globe here at Belvidere during the regular season and liked it well enough to plant it in my garden again this year. I have no experience with a fall crop but think it is worth a trial. Manglobe has performed very well as a fall tomato.

If the hot weather has ruined your early greens, there is still time to plant some New Zealand spinach, which is a warm season crop. It is not related to spinach and I have noticed that the boys in my vegetable gardening classes who have taken some home for trial usually come back for more. I find that most of the boys in these classes have never eaten Swiss Chard, New Zealand spinach, kohlrabi, eggplant, sprouting broccoli, or cauliflower. That means that those crops were not grown in the gardens back home. I would say that is an indication that our planting plans need a little revision before next year. At least three people have asked me recently if asparagus could be grown in North Carolina. It most certainly can, but I must admit it is not found in many gardens. It is a perennial crop and perhaps for that reason does not fit in the cultural programs of most gardens. Once planted, it will remain productive for at least 10 years if taken care of. In the Coastal Plain and Piedmont it is best planted in November or December; in the mountain area probably March is best. One year old asparagus crowns may be bought from any large seed store. The Mary Washington variety is recommended.

Fifty crowns should be enough for the average family. Prepare a trench about eight inches deep and set the crowns 18 inches apart, covering with four inches of soil and later filling in the trench as the plants come up. Asparagus does not thrive in a very acid soil. No spears should be harvested the first spring after planting, or until the crop has gone through one growing season.

AUXILIARY HOLDS MEETING
The Auxiliary of the Wm. Paul Stallings Post of the American Legion met Friday night, June 1, at the home of Mrs. Carroll Ward at Belvidere. Mrs. B. C. Berry, president of the unit, presided. Prayer was led by Mrs. Tom Perry and the minutes were read by Mrs. Tom White.

During the business session, Mrs. Edna Webb gave a report on the unit's Poppy Day sales, which amounted to $193.73; a vote of appreciation was extended Mrs. Webb and those who assisted her in conducting the sales. Mrs. Ralph White read a message from the department's president, Mrs. Mildred Rhyne. Mrs. C. F. Sumner made a report on an installation meeting held at Edenton which was attended by a number of members of the local unit. It was announced that Mrs. W. F. Ainsley had been named as delegate of the unit to the State Auxiliary Convention held last week at Asheville.

At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served.

FARM AGENT'S NEWS
If the boll weevil follows the pattern of last year he will be showing up in the cotton fields in a few days, it is reported from the county agent's office. However, weather conditions may have changed the picture a little. Last year the fields that paid off were those that were dusted with toxaphene before squares were formed. Growers may not want to make pre-square toxaphene applications for weevils this year as last year, but conditions must be watched carefully in each locality. Preparations should be made to apply materials before squaring if necessary. To insure a sufficient number of squares, however, dusting should begin at time of squaring and be continued for at least twenty-one days which is the time required for the weevil to complete its life cycle. Applications should be made at intervals not longer than seven days since under normal conditions it is effective for only about one week. If conditions warrant, dustings should be continued longer than twenty-one days. The amount of dust will vary with conditions, but a pretty good guide is to use eight to ten pounds, at the time of squaring and increase it by two pounds each week thereafter.

NOTES ON SOIL CONSERVATION
Arba Winslow set out some kudzu alongside a large ditch this spring to help stabilize the banks. Some of the plants have runners several feet long already. Mr. Winslow is keeping the runners turned so they will grow down the sides of the ditch. Frank Skinner seeded some Caley peas last fall. The Caley pea is a winter legume and can be used for grazing or cover crop. Caley peas are mildly toxic to livestock during the period while seed is forming. If it becomes necessary to remove livestock when peas begin to bloom. The peas are in bloom now on Mr. Skinner's farm and they look similar to vetch. Conservation farm plans were prepared during May for W. C. Chappell, T. H. Jones, E. L. Henderson, J. E. Henderson, F. M. Copeland, Herbert Chappell, Elmer Lassiter, and Eddie Hayrail.
