

Farm Home Week Dates Announced

Farm and Home Week, an annual event which is attended by several thousand Tar Heel farm men and women, will be held at N. C. State College, Raleigh, from Monday, July 30, through Thursday, August 2.

Theme for this year's program will be "For Better Rural and Family Living." Family problems—including food, shelter, clothing, savings and security, health and medical care, and recreation—will be given special attention. The place of the rural church in a community also will be emphasized.

An outstanding list of speakers is being lined up, according to F. S. Sloan, extension program planning leader and secretary of Farm and Home Week. Classes will be held in special subjects, and the latest models of farm machinery for all purposes will be on exhibit.

Social and recreational features, including group singing and music by church choirs and county home demonstration choruses, have been planned for each evening. Professional and amateur skaters will give an ice show in the William Neal Reynolds Coliseum on the final evening.

Special programs and demonstrations will be given on poultry Tuesday afternoon, on livestock Wednesday, and on field crops Thursday. The Thursday program will include a visit to an outstanding Wake County farm to study organizations, irrigation and production practices.

Needed adjustments in agriculture on both the national and State levels will be discussed by outstanding agricultural leaders.
