

Vendors Must Leave Road Rights-of-Way

Vendors of produce or any other commodities who sell from stands or vehicles on the right-of-way of any state road and have not moved off the right-of-way by Monday of this week will face arrest for encroachment.

On that day, State highway patrolmen and other officers began enforcement of an ordinance adopted on July 6 by the State Highway and Public Works Commission as a safety measure and also to conform with government regulations which require cleared rights-of-way in order for the State to receive Federal-aid funds for highways.

The Commission set the date for beginning enforcement at October 15 in order to give North Carolina farmers and others with roadside stands an opportunity to operate through the summer and fall sales season and thus to avoid working too great a hardship upon them. Meantime, the Commission began giving notice through farm agencies, law enforcement agencies and public information media that enforcement would start October 15.

On and after October 15, it will be illegal for anyone to sell produce or merchandise from vehicles parked on the right-of-way of any primary or secondary road or from stands erected thereon.

Violations of the ordinance will constitute a misdemeanor, and each day such violation continues shall constitute a new and separate offense.

During November, the Commission will conduct a special drive to get the cooperation of advertisers to remove signs from highway rights-of-way. If the voluntary effort is not successful, the Commission will take whatever legal steps are available. This also is being done to conform with Federal highway requirements.

two seasons but thus far corn heavily infested and placed in storage has not been fully protected by the material. Further tests are being conducted. The work thus far indicates the material has some value in reducing insect buildup if the initial infestation is not too high, but the length of period of effective control must still be worked out.

Home Clubs Plan State Song Book

The Music Committee of the North Carolina Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs has decided to publish a song book, according to Miss Ruth Current, State home demonstration agent for the State College Extension Service.

The book will be known as the "North Carolina Home Demonstration Song Book" and will contain 64 songs of various types, Miss Current said. It will be used to promote the music program now being conducted by the Federation throughout the State.

Meeting at Durham, the committee discussed goals for the year and decided that an effort would be made to organize a home demonstration chorus in every county. Church music will be emphasized, and men as well as women and boys and girls will be invited to participate.

The State committee, headed by Mrs. J. Paul Davenport of Pictolus, held its meeting in conjunction with North Carolina's first Rural Church Music School, sponsored by Durham County home demonstration clubs and attended by Club women from Durham, Wake, Orange, Chatham, Granville, Franklin, and Vance counties.

The two-day school included discussions on problems facing the rural church in preparing music programs. Instruction was given by Mrs. Eugene L. Umstead and Mrs. George L. Lindsay, director and accompanist of the Durham County Home Demonstration Chorus.

Members of the State Music Committee in addition to Mrs. Davenport include Mrs. George Smith of Concord, Mrs. Broadus Jones of Route 1, Hope Mills, Mrs. E. B. McIntyre of Red Oak, Mrs. Oliver Richardson of New Bern, Mrs. J. C. Dodson of Route 1, Durham, and Mrs. Marvin Whitmire of Brevard.

Grain Insects Cause Big Loss On Farms

Don't wait until your horse is stolen to lock the stables. And don't wait until your grain crib or bin is full to do something about protecting it from insects.

That's the advice of George D. Jones, insect control specialist for the State College Extension Service, who says insects attacking stored grain cause high losses on North Carolina farms each year.

If grain is stored in a place where fumigation cannot be carried out satisfactorily, says Jones, there's little the farmer can do except sell it. The fumigation will be wasted unless all four sides and the floor of the storage area are gas-tight.

It isn't too early, says the specialist, for farmers to begin thinking about corn storage. All storage bins should be cleaned of old corn and the walls sprayed with DDT. The old corn may be shelled and stored in a tight place. If it is infested it can be treated with a fumigant.

"After the crib is filled, it's too late to do much about killing insects," Jones cautions. "Most of the work has to be done in advance." A thorough farm cleanup, he adds, is one of the best effective weapons to use in fighting insects of any kind.

A commercial dust form of insecticide mixed with the grain, known as "grain protectant," is being studied by insect control specialists at State College. Tests have been underway for
