Cases tried on Thursday of last week included 10 in which Freddie Lee, youthful Negro, was charged with breaking and entering and larceny. Lee was convicted of similar charges on Wednesday, in one case, and he entered a plea of guilty to the 10 counts. Judge Williams sentenced the youth to not less than 7 or more than 10 years for breaking into Diver's Jewelry. He received sentences of 3 to 5 years on all other counts, and the judgment read he is to serve one 3 to 5 years sentence before beginning the 7 to 10 years sentence. Judgment was continued in four of the cases, to be passed upon at a later term of court and judgment was suspended in five of the cases pending good behavior for five years after his release from prison. The judge explained the complicated judgment by state the youth will serve some 15 years in prison.

A mistrial was declared in the case in which Charlie Dail was charged with driving drunk.

A verdict of not guilty was returned in the case in which William Jenkins was charged with breaking and entering.

Elva Lee and Alexander McDonald, Negroes, charged with aiding Freddie Lee to escape jail, entered pleas of not contempra. They were ordered to pay the costs of court and placed on probation for a period of two years.
