Russian Propaganda

Russia has recently set up an iron and steel combine in Bulgaria. In announcing this, the Soviets point with pride how satellite industrialization is carried out.

It seems that workers from all over Bulgaria are to be mobilized and compulsorily transferred to the site to work for the joint Soviet-Bulgarian in building this plant, which is to be known as the Lenin Combine.

In exploiting and enslaving this weak agrarian nation by imperialist expansion, Russian propaganda explains that "the brotherly Soviet Union helps the free workers of peace-loving nations strengthen their national sovereignty and economic independence."

The American Spirit

Robert Paysour, a 200-pound fireman and part-time funeral director at Gastonia, North Carolina, is now either on his way or already at Folkestone, England. The breast-stroke swimmer is going to attempt to swim the English Channel.

The idea never had occurred to him until he told some firemen, in the fire-house at Gastonia, that he had swum six miles upstream last summer. "They didn't believe it," Mr. Paysour said. He added that because they didn't believe him, he got mad and said he would swim fourteen miles up the river.

Paysour estimated the odds against this feat at ten-to-one, but said he actually swam twenty-two miles upstream and made it in sixteen hours and sixteen minutes, using his breast-stroke all the way.

"I felt better when I came out than when I went in," he added. That convinced the business men in his home town that he could swim the Channel and they chipped in and gave him $1700.

Now, the fireman is in England, getting ready to make his breast-stroke attempt. A friend, when asked what he thought of Paysour's chances, replied, "He doesn't discourage easy." This is certainly the American spirit, whether or not Mr. Paysour makes it to France in his Channel swim.

Real Problems Faced In Rearming Germany

The proposed rearmament of Germany to a limited extent, raises a question between the three Western powers and the West German Government.

The Germans, who are called upon to pay the cost of the troops that now occupy their country, in view of the unconditional surrender of the Third Reich in 1945, maintain that if they undertake to create a German contingent for the international army, they should be relieved of the occupation costs.

The British and the French, with economies already strained by the expenses of rearmament, assert that it will be impossible to go to the people of their country for the money with which to maintain divisions that, in essence, protect the Germans from the Russians.

Faced with an increasing economic burden, the British and French are utterly unable to speed up their own rearmament and, at the same time, pick up the cost of occupying Germany. The German Government, in its own behalf, points out that it is unable to pay the cost of maintaining three Allied armies inside its borders and, at the same time, bear the expense of recruiting, training and rearming a German contingent.

In this dilemma, the three nations are inclined to assume that the only possible solution is for the United States to provide West Germany with weapons and equipment, or make a loan that will enable the West Germans to buy weapons and equipment.

Americans reading this resume of the issues involved in the rearming of Germany should not conclude that our British and French allies, or the government of West Germany, seek to shift the entire burden upon this country. The facts of the case are that each of these three countries suffered enormous material damage during the war while the United States had no such experience. In the effort to rehabilitate their economy and repair the damage of war, the three governments are faced with stupendous financial problems. Granted that each is governed by the most sincere purposes of cooperation, the difficulties that face them are real, not imaginary.

Pullets And Layers Need Lots Of Water

Both growing pullets and layers need plenty of fresh, cool water now that hot weather is here.

Chickens won't drink much water unless it is cool and fresh, says T. B. Morris, extension poultry specialist, North Carolina State College. This means, he says, that the pullets will not grow out as they should and the hens will not lay as many eggs as they could if they don't have a constant supply of cool water on hot days.

One way of having water when needed is to install an automatic system. This saves time and labor and makes the job of caring for chickens easier.

If water is available from a gravity or pressure system it can be piped to the pullets on range and to the hens in the laying house.

Another method used by some growers to provide a regular supply of water to pullets on range, is to have a barrel or drum on skids. A spigot or hose from the barrel or drum will keep water before the pullets if the drum is kept filled. The water can be kept cool by painting the drum with aluminum paint or building a shelter over the drum and water fountain.

"It has been said that water is the cheapest feed for chickens, so make sure your birds have plenty of fresh, cool water at all times," advises Specialist Morris.

ROADEO JUNE 13-14

H. D. (Tarvia) Jones, head of the N. C. Highway Safety Division, will direct the activities of the 18th Annual Trucker's Rodeo, according to J. T. Outlaw, Executive Secretary of the N. C. Motor Carriers Association, sponsor of the popular event.

Director Jones has called the 1952 rodeo, which is scheduled for June 13-14 at Winston-Salem, an exhibition of "precision driving by professionals." He confidently predicted that this year's event would be the "greatest rodeo of all times." The rodeo annually attracts the state's best truck drivers who compete in elaborate tests of driving skills.

He who is not exactly sincere lives in but half his being, self-mutilated, self-paralyzed.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS WASTE

When kidney function slows down, many folks complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headache and dizziness. Don't suffer longer with these discomforts if reduced kidney function is getting you down—due to such common causes as stress and strain, over-exposure to exposure to cold. Minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or wrong diet may cause getting up nights or frequent passages.

Don't neglect your kidneys if these conditions bother you. Try Doan's Pills—a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 60 years. While often otherwise caused, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief from these discomforts—help the 16 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!
