Be Sure To Vote

Another primary election will be held in the county tomorrow, to determine the nomination for the office of Register of Deeds, and the state office of Associate Justice.

While it is highly probable that the number of votes cast in the run-off primary will fall far short of the number of votes cast on May 31, it behooves all eligible voters to go to the polls and vote tomorrow.

The campaign conducted by the candidates seeking both the office of Register of Deeds and Associate Justice has been on a high level and the candidates are to be congratulated upon their manners and actions while campaigning for the nomination.

New Use for TV

The British Admiralty has found a new use for television. The Admiralty recently succeeded in locating the sunken submarine Affray, which was sunk off Alderney Island during the war. Though echo-sounding had located many hulks in the area, it took television to identify the sub as the Affray.

The Admiralty reports that a television set can be lowered to 1,000 feet and that officers, sitting in a darkened room, can examine the ocean bottom as they pass over it.

The only shortcoming of the new system is that it is only a black-and-white picture. An Admiralty research engineer says color television would be much more satisfactory and that the pictures would not be monotonously green or blue. Whether or not the Admiralty gets its color, the new detection system seems to herald a new era in salvaging operations, which will reclaim many cargoes from excessive depths which have long defied salvagers.

The Railroads Stir

Faced with a steady decline in passenger travel since World War II, 14 leading railroads in the East recently took steps to recover business which is being lost to the airlines and highways. These railroads reduced coach rates, effective this month, by 25 per cent on round trip tickets for groups of three or more and for family groups by permitting children under 12, with a parent, to travel free.

It is interesting to note that in every year since 1930, with the exception of the war period, the nation's railroads have incurred a loss in passenger train operations. Their loss last year alone amounted to $581,600,000. This is the largest loss yet incurred in a year.

In an effort to reduce these losses, the railroads have increased fares steadily since the end of World War II. They also installed new equipment and completed faster schedules, but, despite huge expenditures in this field, the railroads so far have not yet succeeded in reversing the downward trend in passenger travel on the railroads.

Generally speaking, the heaviest losses sustained by the railroads in passenger operations are caused by short-distance passenger trains. The through, long-distance passenger trains have generally earned profits. Because the railroads have increased rates to the point where further increases will certainly drive customers to the airlines (which are reducing fares) and to other means of travel, it is vital that the railroad companies find new ways of reducing their costs.

Costs could probably be reduced if new, more efficient bookkeeping and ticket-selling systems were adopted. However, because more efficiency in operation would require fewer employees, and because labor unions fight any move to cut employment, this is a major dilemma unsolved by railroad management. Unless a solution is eventually worked out, the American public must expect more and more discontinued trains and continued high rates.
