

BOY HELPS "LITTLE LASSES" WIN PRIZE IN 4-H COTTON BAG SEWING CONTEST

An eight-year-old boy, sole male member of the Cranston, Rhode Island, "Little Lassies" 4-H Club has helped to win first place and a deluxe Singer sewing machine for the club in a statewide Sew With Cotton Bags Contest.

The boy is Charles "Chard" Henry

III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry, Jr., of Cranston. He joined the girls' club after his sister urged him to sew for the competition sponsored by Singer and the Textile Bag Manufacturer's Association. Working 15 minutes a day, which his mother allotted him over a seven-month, one-day period, "Chard" painstakingly hand embroidered a cotton food bag apron.

His sister made a polka-dot feed bag print dress. They got the bags from their father, who as a poultry farmer, buys his feed in print cotton sacks.

Now, two other boys want to join the "Little Lassies" and the club name may be changed to the "Cranston Little Lads and Lassies," the club leader said.

The contest is now underway in four other states, according to the National Cotton Council. Four other states will come into the contest this fall, with 18 other states entering early in 1953.

Clubs participating make complete exhibits of wearing apparel and household items from feed, flour fertilizer and other cotton bags for entry in a county-wide contest. Clubs winning first place in the county contests compete in the state-wide contests for a deluxe Singer Cabinet sewing machine, first prize, and $75 worth of sewing equipment, second prize.
