

Postmasters Now Under Civil Service

The National League of District Postmasters of the United States, representing postmasters of the second, third and fourth classes, endeavoring to inform the public of the facts relating to postmasters' appointments has released the following statement concerning those facts:

"Information given to the press by some political leaders has, in some instances, created the impression that postmasters might be removed from civil service and appointed politically. This, of course, is erroneous, as postmasters have the same civil service status as other federal and postal employees, and are protected in their positions by the Civil Service laws and regulations so long as they render efficient and satisfactory service.

"The United States Civil Service Commission has issued a statement in which it said, 'Postmasters were brought under the Federal civil service system in 1938. Every postmaster not only has to qualify for appointment through an examination given by the United States Civil Service Commission, but in the examination, he must be among the top 3 eligibles. After appointment, like other Federal workers, the postmaster serves without limitation on his term, subject to the same competent handling of his office, as is required of all other civil service personnel.

"The country benefited when postmasters were placed under the competitive civil service. We should remember that not only post office clerks, carriers, and supervisors, but postmasters themselves are civil service workers appointed through competitive examinations. Postmasters are also under the Retirement Act."

"The public is interested in efficient postal service and efficiency can be gained only through experience. To revert to the 'spoils system' would mean short appointments, inexperienced management, and postmasters who will take more interest in politics than in good postal service, because of obligations they incur under such conditions."

SIDNEY LAYDEN

A precious one from us is taken. A voice we loved is still. There is a vacancy in our hearts Which never can be filled.

It was such a shock to hear of Sidney going so soon, but we know it teaches us God's word that everything happens for good to them that love Him. Sidney was a sweet child, his passing grieves me greatly. His mother.
