An Electrification Workshop Held For Albemarle District

A four day Rural Electrification workshop has been completed for vocational agriculture teachers in the Albemarle District. T. B. Elliott, district supervisor of Agriculture education in 20 Northeastern counties was in charge of the classes which were held in Hertford during July. Instruction at the Hertford center was provided by rural representatives of the Virginia Electric and Power Company.

The Hertford center for Vocational Agriculture teachers in Pasquotank, Camden, Currituck, Perquimans, Chowan, Gates, Martin, Washington, and Tyrrell counties is but one of 20 centers throughout the state where similar workshops in rural electrification were held. Instruction at other centers were provided by other major power suppliers in North Carolina. The Virginia Electric and Power Company provided instructors for two other centers at Rich Square and Chocowinity.

The workshop in Hertford began on Tuesday, July 7, and was held each Tuesday until four meetings were held. The instruction covered the properties of a properly wired house and an inspection of a house wired.

selection of electrical equipment for the farm, proper wiring for other farm buildings, and the inspection of a farm that has been wired.

The Virginia Electric and Power Company instructors at Hertford indicated the belief that the use of electricity on the farm was just beginning. They said that experts believe the use of electricity on the farm will better than double within the next ten years. Mr. Elliott said, "with the use of electricity on farms increasing so rapidly, the vocational agriculture teacher will no doubt be faced with many problems in extending its use to include more and more farm operations. These rural electrification workshops should enable the teacher to help the farmer in solving these problems."

Mr. Elliott also explained that this was the second such workshop which has been held in North Carolina on Rural Electrification. The workshop last year pertained largely to the use of electricity in the farm home and a certain amount of actual repair work was done by the teachers.

Do You Remember?

BY J. P. PERRY

The days of the "Circuit Chautauqua," quite a good while ago? These were evenings of entertainment and pleasure, of a general public nature—

First, there was a group of men who had to guarantee the sale of tickets—enough to pay the personnel of the Chautauqua—A big tent was erected on the school grounds and soon all was ready for a big time; lectures, plays, musicians and magicians such as "This Way Up," "Nothing But the Truth for 24 Hours," "The Worth of Man," and other forgotten subjects—Practically everyone who attended these entertainments enjoyed them, and they were asked to return season after season—You remember the statement made by the Chautauqua manager just before the last "act"?

"Ladies and Gentlemen at the conclusion of the next scene you will please fold your chair and please take it outside as you leave—thereby helping the boys who take down the tent as they have to pack up and load the trucks as quickly as possible and show again tomorrow night in Windsor, N. C. We have enjoyed our visit with you very much. Thanks for everything."

And another Chautauqua season was over.

INFANT BROUGHTON

Funeral services for the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Broughton were conducted Tuesday at noon at the graveside in Cedarwood Cemetery, with the Rev. Charles W. Duling, officiating. The services were directed by the Lynch Funeral Home.
