NATO Officer Guest Speaker At Rotary Meeting Tuesday

LCDR Elberts, a native of Java, Indonesia, is a graduate of the Royal Netherlands Naval College, and holds both the Dutch and United Nations Korean medals.

In a brief talk on the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Lcdr Elbers told the Rotarians NATO was formed out of fear by the 14 member nations to buy time against possible aggression from a common enemy. He pointed out that since its organization in 1949 NATO has made a steady advancement, and growth, despite national opinions among the membership, which had to be ironed out to perfect the group.

The treaty, forming NATO, calls for its operation for 20 years, according to Lcdr Elbers, and hope was expressed that by the end of this time plans for a United Europe might be worked out as well as economic problems confronting the European nations due to the shrinking of the vast empires of the world.

One of the greatest advancements to date made under NATO, Mr. Elbers said was the standardizing of codes and equipment used by the military division of NATO and he illustrated this point by an incident connected with the Korean War, which might have been impossible if tried under the old method whereby each nation used separate commands and equipment in carrying out assignments.
