trade, economy in government, public and many others too numerous to mention. Mr. Maddrey will take the stand which was adopted at the State Convention in Raleigh early in November. It should be of interest to all farmers to watch and see just what influence the policies which will be adopted at the National Convention will have on the rules or laws passed by the next Congress in regards to agriculture.

Should someone from this county attend the convention it would be beneficial to the County Farm Bureau as well as himself, and if three or four drove together the expense would not be great and just think of the Christmas shopping one could also do while in Chicago! It has been said that the man who is the greatest success is not the go-getter who leaves his children richer, but a go-giver who leaves his community happier.

Farm Bureau Views

The North Carolina Farm Bureau makes plans for its members to attend the national convention to be held in Chicago through December 13, 14 and 15th.

Gordon Maddrey of Ahsokie, who has served North Carolina Farm Bureau as president for the past year, is to attend the Chicago convention to present North Carolina's resolutions before the largest farm organization ever assembled. On many important issues, such as tariffs, world
