ADENAUER'S BACK TO WALL—RESPONSIBILITIES AGE IKE—FRANCE—1919 AGAIN? BUSINESS FERNS UP—

Washington — French Premier Mendès-France pushed German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's back to the wall in the Paris agreements late in October and finally succeeded in getting most of what he wanted. He forced the Germans to give up rights and interests in territory which had been German, the Saar.

The French virtually won the Saar from Germany as a result of Mendès-France's demands. This was the price Adenauer had to pay for German sovereignty and membership in the western defense community. He bowed to the French demands only after it appeared the French were ready to wreck the Paris Nine Power talks if they did not get their way.

It is ominous business for the French to be pushing Germany around on the Saar question, and such a spectacle—a weaker nation pushing a potentially stronger one against a wall—raises serious concern for the future. Already political parties which have supported Adenauer on his foreign policy are serving notice that they can't go along on the Saar deal.

There is no worry about the immediate future, but one does not have to go back far to see the result of imposing hard terms on a beaten country. It was the Rhineland, the Polish corridor, and other territorial losses, including all of her colonies, which stirred Germany to such resentment and many Germans ripe for a nationalist demagogue like Hitler.

The same questions arose in 1919 that arise concerning the Saar agreement. President Wilson had announced to the world that he went into the war on the basis of the fourteen points. One of them was that territory inhabited by Germans would not be taken away from Germany and given to France, Poland or other countries.

Yet the statesmen who wrote the treaty would not go along with Wilson's ideals. They punished Germany and took her territory and from that moment on more rational leaders feared the Germans would one day rise in a spirit of revenge—bent on recovering lost territory.

The Germans are not accepted Adenauer's concession of the Saar. Red agents, nationalists, and others will use this diplomatic defeat to stir hatreds for years to come. And when Germany is once again stronger than France—will each Chancellor, in turn, be able to repress this nationalist controversy?

Instead of exhibiting magnanimity, the French have driven a hard bargain. The Germans were forced to accept. The same course was followed once before . . . shades of 1919 all over again.

The responsibilities of the President of the United States are a tremendous weight on any man's shoulders, and President Dwight D. Eisenhower—though taking much time off to rest—is aging under the strain.

The life of a President is very different from that of a military officer, who has been brought up believing in obedience, a sense of duty and personal honor. Unfortunately the political code is a few notches down the ladder from the military code.

Eisenhower, accustomed to a completely different type of life, is making a dedicated effort to do a good job, and whether he succeeds or not is a question that will have to be left to historians. It is evident, however, that the President appears to be aging under the strain. It is only natural that he would, and the President recently celebrated his 64th birthday.

Few Presidents have offered for reelection at this age, and when 1956 comes around, Ike will be 66. If he were reelected, he would reach the age of 70 before his second term expired.

Business is showing definite signs of picking up and it now seems certain that between now and the end of December activity will be much increased. Automobile production and the Christmas season are factors, but not the only ones, behind the pick-up.

Unemployment is at its lowest level of the year and inventories are likely to be built up gradually after reaching a low point only recently. Building is still booming and increased defense orders should stimulate industrial activity for at least the first half of 1955.

Some Republicans had hoped this pick-up would come sooner—by September, at least. But it came a little later than many had anticipated. The result is that it didn't have much effect on the congressional elections.

Good Seeds Are Best Investment For Crops

"Investment in good seeds pays great dividends." That is the firm belief of Stewart Lipscomb of Blanch community, Blanch, Route 1.

Negro County Agent E. B. T. Carraway says that Lipscomb who has met all requirements of the N. C. Crop Improvement Association and is now a member, had 50 bushels of Taylor wheat which tested pure seed 99.81 per cent and germination 93.50 per cent.

Several other Caswell County farmers produced Taylor wheat in 1954 but did not have their seed certified.

The previous year, 30 bushels of Taylor wheat were seeded in Caswell according to Carraway. His opinion of the wheat for Piedmont farmers with good leaf rust resistance, was as follows: better than average mosaic resistance, above average cold resistance, and good straw strength.

He believes that the Taylor will hold its own with the best of wheat varieties now in use. In addition, the Negro County Agent says millers have found Taylor wheat makes an excellent quality family flour, is an attractive wheat with more eye appeal than Atlas.

All of the Caswell County farmers who produced Taylor wheat in 1954 were well satisfied, but Lipscomb was especially enthusiastic concerning the variety.

Worn Out

Hubby—A new fur coat is out of the question. Why, you've only worn that one for two years.

Wifey—Yes, but the rabbit wore it three years before that.
