Colonial Offers Food, Menus for Long Week-end

Elaborate preparations have been made by Colonial Stores for taking care of the needs of thousands who are planning outdoor meals and picnics over the Labor Day week-end. As Executive Advertising explained it, "We are sure that many people are enjoying the pleasure of outdoor eating. Recognizing this, we have reduced prices on many items usually included in outdoor menus."

Busy housewives will find excellent ideas for week-end menus in the Colonial Stores newspaper advertisement this week. These menus have been specially prepared by Colonial's well-known home economist, Nancy Carter, and feature many of the foods recommended from week to week in the "Nancy Carter TV Program."

"We try to price our foods, not only for holidays but throughout the year, as low as or lower than our competitors," said Mr. Ashworth. "At the same time, we know from the large number of appreciative letters and comments we receive that customers are getting more than low prices. They like the kind of home-made help we give them through Nancy Carter's tested recipes and menus."

"It's low prices plus helpful service which explains the popularity of our stores,"
