

Game Protectors Ordered To Enforce Wildlife Laws

The state's wildlife protectors—253 of them—have received orders to "crack down" on hunting violations with special emphasis on nimrods who go hunting without licenses. Walter Anderson, Chief of the Wildlife Resources Commission's Wildlife Protective Division, said that hunting or fishing without proper license is by far the most frequent violation of the fishing and hunting rules. Anderson said that during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1955, more than 4,000 persons were prosecuted for hunting or fishing without having a proper license, almost two-thirds of total violations. Incidence of violations has been high thus far in the season.

"Many of these violations," Anderson said, "are unintentional. But North Carolina law makes certain requirements concerning license to hunt and fish and these requirements must be met or violators will be apprehended and prosecuted."

Anderson, a veteran of twenty years in law enforcement work, said that hunting without proper license is most common during the early days of the hunting season, but pointed out that hunting licenses go on sale August 1, a month before the first open season, and this gives hunters plenty of time in which to acquire licenses for the coming season.

"We have 143 seasoned wildlife protectors in the field to enforce the law," Anderson said. "They are equipped with patrol cars, a patrol plane, patrol boats, and 2-way shortwave radio communication. In addition, we are adding ten of 23 recent graduates of the wildlife protection training school at the Institute of Government, U.N.C., Chapel Hill, to the staff."

"Although emphasis will be placed on persons hunting or fishing without license, such violations as unplugged shotguns, exceeding bag limits, and out-of-season hunting will not be overlooked. Copies of the official regulations have been distributed to license dealers throughout the state and are available to license buyers. No one will be excused for failure to be informed of the law."

4-H Workshop Held Here Wednesday

A workshop to study how to assemble a long-time record on 4-H Club activities was held on Wednesday afternoon, September 14 at the Agricultural Building. Bobby Smith and Jean Edwards conducted the workshop, and showed ten boys and girls how to correctly assemble the material for a long-time record. They demonstrated by showing records that were correctly done as compared to one that was incorrectly put together. "This should be most helpful to the 4-H Club members and it is hoped that something of the type can be worked out each year in the future," stated Mrs. Florence W. Webb, Perquimans Assistant Home Agent. "Bobby and Jean have conducted two such workshops in Currituck County and deserve full credit for having prepared such a good display," said Mrs. Webb.

SBA ACTS TO HELP COUNTY VICTIMS OF HURRICANE IONE

Carolina have been declared as disaster areas: Beaufort, Bertie, Camden, Carteret, Chowan, Craven, Currituck, Dare, Gates, Hertford, Hyde, Jones, Lenoir, Martin, Northampton, Onslow, Pamlico, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Pitt, Tyrrell, and Washington. However, anyone who has suffered losses in undeclared nearby counties may determine their eligibility under the SBA disaster loan program by contacting the New Bern office. Applications will also continue to be accepted for damage due to Hurricanes Connie and Diane.

Although the New Bern Office will be the only established headquarters for SBA, at this time, it is planned to send SBA representatives to various points in the stricken areas on certain days to receive applications and consult with hurricane sufferers. The location and dates of these itinerant stations will be announced through the newspapers and radio stations. Meanwhile persons desiring to obtain information or file applications should apply to the New Bern Disaster Office, or to the SBA Regional Office at 900 North Lombardy Street in Richmond, Virginia, or its Charlotte, North Carolina Branch Office, 1315 Independence Building.
