Middle East War News—
Washington Seeks Solution—
Israel To Attack?
The U. S. Balloons—

Washington—Secret reports by diplomats, pouring into capitals in every part of the world, indicate that many observers in the Middle East expect war to break out in this area of the world this spring.

There are those who say such an outcome is inevitable. Because Russia has begun to furnish arms for the Arab countries, Israel is placed in the exact position in which Germany found itself, in 1941.

The Arab countries around tiny Israel boast a population that gives Arab Army commanders twenty times the manpower available to Israel. But, as yet, this manpower is largely untrained, and the Arab armies are small and generally not modernly equipped.

As of right now, the Israeli Army could probably defend itself successfully against the combined forces of the Arab countries. The most efficient Arab Army is that of Egypt, which has been rushing rearmament at a furious pace.

There are some who believe Israel would win a war, if it were touched off immediately. The Israelis, however, might have to subdue their neighbors to the north and east, and then turn their attention to Egypt and her allies, on what would be the decisive front.

Or, Israel might seek to crush the stronger foe first. In any event, Israel would occupy the central position, as Germany has done in two world wars, and it would be up to Israel to decide where to strike the first blow. By concentrating her forces, there is little doubt that Israel could mount an effective offensive in an opening blow against her adversaries.

The burning question is whether Israel is in the position which faced Germany, when Russian mobilization was ordered in 1914. In those days it took several months to complete mobilization. The General Staff of the Kaiser's armies already had a plan of operations in the event France and Russia (bound by an alliance) were to go to war against Germany.

That plan called for a quick German thrust, in overwhelming strength, to crush France, first. Then, with English troops barred from French soil, the Germans would turn back to the east, in time to meet the vast armies of slowly-mobilizing Russia. The German plan almost worked but the Kaiser's armies were stopped on the Marne, partly because the great offensive in France was not allotted the number of divisions the French offensive called for.

Washington has sought to pour oil on the troubled waters but is up against the fact that this country has a small but influential Jewish population that screams every time aid is sent the Arabs. Yet the State Department feels that the Arabs, far more numerous and in a strategic position in the Middle East, cannot be alienated—completely cut off from arms aid.

The Russians moved into this picture several months ago and offered to sell arms to Arab countries and are threatening to gain the dominant role in the Arab countries as a result. The State Department cannot allow this to happen. It has tried to send small quantities of material to Arab countries, promised under old agreements, in some cases, and also offer Israel comparable aid.

The policy has pleased neither side. Now reports come saying that Israel—facing large-scale Arab rearmament from Russian sources—will attack her enemies this spring, to force a decision while conditions still give her a good chance of winning.

The weather balloons Russia has been protesting against actually did carry cameras. These balloons former is the traditional site, and five religious sects are rivals in conducting services there and caring for it.

Two thieves were crucified along with Jesus. One reviled him for not rescuing them from their fate, but the other recognized the goodness of Jesus and rebuked his companion calling attention to the fact that they deserved their fate, while Jesus was innocent. This thief asked Jesus to remember him in his kingdom and Jesus promised him that he would be with him in Paradise. No one reading the gospel account of this solemn scene can fail to be moved by a conviction of its sincerity.

All Fishing Boats Liable For License
