Traffic Deaths On Highways Decline During Past Year

Tar Heel traffic deaths last year came to a tentative figure of 1,096 Motor Vehicle Department officials report. Injuries exceeded 17,000.

Last year's highway death toll was well under the near record-breaking toll for 1955, officials pointed out. Mishaps that year killed 1,165 persons, the second bloodiest year in state motoring history.

Delayed deaths—persons injured in 1956 and who die this year—must be included in the year's total, officials said. This will boost the final death toll upward somewhat. They estimated perhaps eight or ten additional fatality reports before the final figure goes into the record book.

Commissioner Joe W. Garrett termed the year "not too disappointing." He called attention to increases of three per cent in licensed drivers, five per cent in vehicle registrations, and a jump of 10 per cent in vehicle travel mileage.

"Considering these facts," Garrett said, "we are probably fortunate not to have had any more fatalities than we did. Still, the slaughter of this many people in a single year is a shameful record we're certainly not satisfied with."

Interviews will be held every Thursday night 8 to 9 o'clock at "The Casino" 34 Edenton Road Street, Hertford, N. C. Jan 18, 25, Feb 1, 8, 15, 22

"In that case, the hushel is lighted as well as the surroundings—the business becomes the medium of a message. This is Christian. But the gospel of being a success in business has so gripped our age that the gospel of being a success as a Christian is often overshadowed by it—the light goes out!"
