

SENATOR SAM ERVIN SAYS

Washington — There is room for honest disagreement as to the approach for legislation in the labor field.

Effective Bill

This being so, I have attempted to pursue a course in the matter that will produce an effective bill for prompt action by Congress in the area of labor corruption, astounding conditions that have been shown by the McClellan Committee on which I have served for two years. The bill that I have co-sponsored with Senator Kennedy meets this need. There is also wide agreement between the Kennedy-Ervin and Administration bills, but the controversy arises over the inclusion of certain Taft-Hartley revisions which I am convinced must be considered in separate bills.

The New York Times recently expressed it this way:

"But, after all, these are matters (picketing, secondary boycotts, etc.) that primarily involve the power and external relations of labor unions, not how they manage their own affairs. Doesn't this mean that amendments to the Taft-Hartley law should be made through a separate, and carefully considered, over-all measure? They seem like excess baggage which might well be temporarily jettisoned now for the sake of reaching the main and immediate objective: Greater democracy, honesty and efficiency within American labor unions."

Testimony

Last week I testified before the Labor subcommittee considering the proposed bill. I related the need for corrective legislation. My position is that the Kennedy-Ervin Bill effectively prohibits the misuse of union funds, provides an effective method of control by local union members, prohibits felons from holding union office and is a good labor reform bill. As I have stated before, I favor eliminating all Taft-Hartley law revisions from a labor reform bill and including them in separate bills. Congress ought to act with haste and wisdom in adopting labor reform legislation. The conditions are a disgrace to our country.

Practical Consideration

Mr. Arthur Krock, a distinguished journalist, recently discussed in his column the various views on proposed legislation, including the Kennedy-Ervin Bill. He concludes his article with the following:

"There is, of course, a practical consideration which supports the Kennedy-Ervin approach. This is that any progress toward curbing the excessive power of the un-is worth making; that the Kennedy-Ervin measure provides this, will surely be approved, but may fail if amending it as the administration proposes leaves organized labor with the choice of all or none.

"This consideration appeals to many Members of Congress who cannot be fairly tagged as pawns of the unions. And naturally it appeals to others: Those for whom it is politically safe to vote for the Kennedy-Ervin bill but not for the administration supple-

NORTH CAROLINA MEANS BETTER LIVING

A new source of fuel and power for better living, as well as for industrial development in North Carolina, is found in the growth of natural gas service. Piedmont, North Carolina and Tidewater are companies that are already, or soon will be, serving most of the major communities in this State with natural gas, via pipe line from Texas.

Other evidence of the "better living" concept to be found in North Carolina is the enlightened approach to the "legal control" system for the sale of beer and ale that has already proven its merits in the best interests of temperance and moderation.

Chevy panel steps lively in Florida...runs day and night, delivers 19.3 miles per gallon!

This '59 Chevy panel is on the go, morning, noon and night; it covers as much as 587 miles a day... runs so constantly that its engine never cools off completely. Yet Mr. Clark Forbes, the Tampa Tribune's circulation manager, reports that his truck is delivering 19.3 miles per gallon.

This year, the light, medium- and heavy-duty trucks of the 1959 Chevrolet Truck-Force fleet are out to whip anything that comes their way—and they've got what it takes to do it!

Take the panel pictured above, for example. Powered by the '59 Thriftmaster 6 with new economy-contoured camshaft, it's building a sensational economy record, despite the sizzling pace of its work. That's typical of the way Chevicars of all sizes are turning to on the most challenging jobs in America. The way they're made, with tough-built truck components, they make the hardest hauls look easy!
