

Costs Of Food Vary With Age

Age is an important consideration in estimating family food costs.

Though it is often said that growing boys eat more than their fathers, and elderly people eat less than those who are younger, more definite information on food costs as related to age is needed for successful budgeting.

In general, food costs increase with age up to 20 years, then decrease, according to Mrs. Ruby P. Uzie, consumer marketing specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service.

Food economists used average countywide retail food prices for August 1958 to estimate that on a moderate cost plan, feeding a three-year-old boy would cost $4.50 a week compared to $11.50 for a 16-year-old boy and $8.50 for a 75-year-old man. The estimates were based on home meals, not "eating out".

Cost of feeding children, at any age under 12 years is the same for boys or girls.
