LIBRARY NEWS

An old map of North Carolina, printed in 1755, has been brought to the Perquimans County Library by David Cox, who earlier gave to the library an old map of the Albemarle Sound and the rivers that flow into it. The map of North Carolina shows the colony as it was when the western boundary was the Mississippi River. Both maps are displayed in the library.

Non-fiction predominates in the new books in the library this week. Some of these are: My Adventures As An Illustrator, by Norman Rockwell, famous for his covers on The Saturday Evening Post; The Gesell Institute Party Book, a handbook of parties for ages three to fifteen; Arthritis, Medical Treatment and Home Care, a book for family use; The Bible in the Making, by MacGregor; Days and Customs of all

Sonny-Daddy, do you think Job ever had stone bruises on his back?

Daddy—No, son. I don't suppose he did.

Sonny—Gee, Daddy, he didn't know anything about suffering, did he?
