Perquimans Weekly Goes Modern This Issue From Letterpress To Offset

The Perquimans Weekly, established November 15, 1934 in Perquimans County, operated and owned by Virginia White Rouseau, a Perquimans County native since Max Campbell's death, changed printers of the weekly with this issue of your paper. The conversion from the letter press to offset method of newspaper production, a more modern and far better method.

Since the paper was established by J. Edwin Bufflap and Hector Lupton, past owners of the Chowan Herald in Edenton, the Perquimans Weekly continued to be printed on letterpress by the Chowan Herald. As of January 1, 1965 Bufflap and Lupton, owners of the Chowan Herald, sold out their paper to the Chowan Herald to a Statesville, N. C. concern, presently managed by L. F. Amburn, Jr.

The Perquimans Weekly has severed all relations with the Chowan Herald in Edenton and is now being printed offset by the Daily Advance in Elizabeth City. The new printer enables us to get your paper to you earlier each week, with a paper that will look far better and in keeping with the times, with offset printing. A job that will be a better job than the paper as gotten since the Chowan Herald changed managers.

The aim of the Perquimans Weekly is still the aim it was started with in 1934, that was the paper be a real community newspaper. Not to take on "City airs". We do not aspire to be better than a country weekly, but we do try to be a good county paper, filled with news of interest to the people of Perquimans County.

In making our change, it will be necessary to have the continued cooperation of all Perquimans, for the Perquimans Weekly if the people of this county want to keep our established home paper here. It can be done with the continued cooperation of the advertisers, subscribers, and anyone needing job printing. This will insure our continued success. For a good newspaper, it takes like everything else "togetherness".

Perquimans County needs its own newspaper, as it now has, and to be owned by a native that has the county and its people at heart. Should another paper come in, the paper will have only one thing in mind—not to keep the business in Perquimans County, but to pull it to the community from which the paper will come. And should a paper of this sort succeed, it would mean the loss of another Perquimans County business for the town and county. Also, it would be striking a death blow to our established businesses we have in Perquimans.

While the Perquimans Weekly is changing its printer, the hope is hereby expressed that the loyal support of the local merchants, and businesses, the enthusiasm of the county correspondents and interest of readers will continue. Without this support, no newspaper or business can exist.

Lets keep our business here in Perquimans County. We are small, and in order for this paper to survive and also the business places established here, we must be united. When you have news, advertising, or printing of any sort, call your own paper "The Perquimans Weekly."

Fall Applied Nitrogen For Small Grain

For many years the general recommendation has been to top-dress small grain with nitrogen in February and March. This is still a good recommendation says R. M. Thompson County Extension Chairman, but research has shown that nitrogen applied in the fall is as effective as spring applications on certain soils. Fall nitrogen applications are recommended on soils which have a silt loam or clay loam texture or which have a high organic matter content so that nitrogen can be held by the soil against leaching.

March and April is the period in which small grains produce most of their growth. It is also the period in which plant requirements for nitrogen is the greatest, regardless of when it is applied. Thus, when nitrogen is applied at seeding, less than half of it has been absorbed by March. If the soil is subject to leaching, much of the fall applied nitrogen may be leached away before the plants have the opportunity to use it. This is why it is necessary to have the "right kind of soil" if you are to realize the maximum benefits of fall applied nitrogen.

There are a number of advantages in applying all of the nitrogen for small grains in the fall. Fall application allows putting all of the fertilizer on at one time, thus extra trips across the field are eliminated. Fall application eliminates the need for spring topdressing when soils are often too wet to support machinery. Bad spring weather often postpones spring topdressings until it is too late for the nitrogen to do the grain the most good. Fall applied nitrogen increases root and top growth and thus reduces plant losses due to "heaving". Nitrogen applications near seeding time, or later in the fall, extend the season during which custom applications can be made.

Regardless of when you apply the nitrogen it is important to use enough nitrogen and other nutrients to produce a profitable crop reminds Mr. Thompson. The best way to determine lime and nutrient needs is to have your soil tested. In most cases small grains will need additional nutrients even though they may follow a heavily fertilized crop such as tobacco.

Have your soil tested now to determine lime and nutrient needs for your small grain and other crops. This is the first step toward high yields and greater profits. Soil sampling supplies are available at your county agricultural worker's office.

50 Years of Service To Youth of Area

Carolina College of Commerce, Elizabeth City, N.C. is celebrating its 50th year of progress and continuous service to young men and women in this part of the State of North Carolina.

Down through these fifty years, educators with vision and zeal have worked hard to give thorough, up-to-date business training at a reasonable cost to all who desired to prepare to serve in a commercial world.

The existence and duration of any institution is indicative of its success in meeting demands of an ever changing world.

High school graduates who are unable to attend the four year colleges and universities, and those who feel that four years is too long a time to prepare for a vocation, have done well to enroll in the various business colleges to obtain the practical and intensive training they need to get a good position.

Carolina College of Commerce has gained a reputation for honesty, integrity, and thoroughness in the preparation of students who have been graduated from its ranks. They have gone forth and have been successful in their chosen field of work and today the demand for our graduates increases faster than we can train and graduate them.

Carolina College of Commerce is licensed and approved by the State Department of Public (See COLLEGE page 4)
