Fall & School Buses

Now that the fall weather is upon us, remember that darker days and poor visibility can add up to tragedy involving school buses.
Under the law in practically every part of this country, drivers are required to stop when school buses are discharging or taking on passengers. This means drivers approaching or following a school bus are required to stop.
In hilly areas, in poor visibility, on curves, cars traveling at today's high speeds are often hard-pressed to stop if they do not see a standing bus a good distance ahead.

Though school buses are supposed to show blinking lights, or stop signals in the form of a raised sign, these signals are sometimes flashed dangerously late by the driver, and oncoming cars are given little time to stop.

In Fashion
Separates are favorites of the college girl. With her plaid coat she can pick up the colors in skirts, blouses, and extra frocks. Add a jacket and a sweater or two and she has a big part of her fall wardrobe.
