The first article appearing summed up recently by North today will be on how public welfare is organized statewide and how the local department fits into the picture.

Public Welfare in North Carolina is a State supervised and county administered program. What makes it even more complicated is that most of the services offered are Federal programs established by the Congress and the majority of the funds to support these programs are supplied by the Federal government, More Federal funds come into North Carolina through the State Department of Public Welfare than through any other State agency, including the education and in inway departments. Recent reports have indicated that this state appropriates a smaller percentage of its funds to public welfare than any other state. Basically the many services offered tall into three categories - financial assistance, medical assistance and social services. Most of these services have certain requirements attached to them by the Federal government by which the State must abide. The State through the General Assembly may make additional laws that affect the administration of the programs, The General Assembly also gives the State Board of Public Welfare authority to establish other policies and requirements that they deem necessary for proper administration. Members of the state Board of Public Welfare are appointed by the Governor for out the A shir years.

Soybean Growers To Vote Tuesday

On Tuesday, May 27, soybean growers will again have the opportunity to vote to determine whether an assessment of 1/2 cents per bushel for all sovbeans sold will be assessed for the next six (6) years. The North Carolina Soybean Producers Association, Inc. has been in operation for three (3) years, and during this three years has engaged in an extensive program to promote research in fertility, weed control and new varieties of soybeans, along with a big push in marketing. The marketing aspects, whereby soybeans are sent to Japan for them to use for edible purposes is showing great promise, and if the North Carolina soybean meets the standards as it appears to be doing, could be of big benefit in the demand for the beans produced in North Carolina, "Every soybean grower should make an effort to vote on Tuesday, May 27 and the polling places are as follows: County

Office Building, J. F. Hollowell and Sons, "Winks", Charles Lay-den Store, Rob Turner Store, Ervin Turner Store, and Cor-prews and Wade Jordan"", states R. M. Thompson, County Extension Chairman.

Minimum tillage is a practice used in some of the adjoining counties and has proved to be a cost reducing measure. In addition to reducing the cost, it will reduce the loss of moisture in the soil at planting time, retard the forming of plowed layer.

Most farmers' planters can now be converted to a minimum tillage planter with little expense. With the approaching season of harvesting small grain, it could possibly be worth considering in planting soybeans,
