This is an electric washing machine. Circa 1920. The end of scrub boards and elbow grease. Just connect it to any electric light socket: its agitators removed washday dirt and its wringer removed water (and buttons). All for a mere 71/22 per kilowatt hour. Of course that was 49 years ago, and you'd hardly expect electric rates to be the same today.

same today.

They're not. Now you pay only 2¢ a kilowatt hour. And you get cleaner clothes.
