FDA Investigating

In a telegram today to Dr. Jacob Koomen, director of the N. C. State Board of Health, the Food and Drug Administration warned that some Mexican ottery or earthenware imported nto the U.S. and used for food purposes, could result in severe iness through lead poisoning.

"Although lead poisoning is a disease not reported to the N. C. State Board of Health," Dr. Koomen explained, "our close working relationship with Chemistry Division of the N. C. Department of Agriculture under whose jurisdiction inrestigation of such matters is carried out - will, I am sure, reveal shortly if the product is being sold in North Carolina."

FDS's investigation of Mexican pottery came in the wake of eports of lead poisoning of a family in the Western U. S. through the continued use of Mexican pottery. Of 28 samples collected 26 contained varying amounts of lead leached from glaze, ranging from traces to significant quantities.

The products may not be marked as made in Mexico, the telegram stated. If, however, there is a suspicion of its Mexican origin, consumers having such pottery or earthenware are urged to discontinue its use with foods immediately. "Lead," Dr. Koomen pointed out, "is a cumulative poison. It is essential, therefore, that its intake by humans by kept to a minimum.'

Pottery that shows a rough or dull glaze rather than a glossy one gives the most lead when mildly acid solutions are placed

Although the FDA action is not an embargo in imports of Mexican pottery, the warning at present applies only to pottery of Mexican origin.
