Why I Am Proud Of America

The following thoughts of students from Mrs. Grace Coston's 5th and 6th grades at Hertford Grammar School on "Why I Am Proud of America" merit publishing.

Twelve papers of students, have been selected for publication and we begin this week publishing six of these students thoughts: the other six will appear in next week's edition of The Perquimans Weekly.

WHY I AM PROUD TO BE AN AMERICAN

I am proud to be an American because of freedom. We have many freedoms. But we must protect our rights at this time of crisis. We must keep our ties with all of our people.

If we do not, our nation will collapse. In America we have beautiful scenery, people, food, and most important of all, freedom. But we must keep it that way. After all God gave us, we should use it wisely. That is why I am proud to be an American.

Bryan Gardner 5th grade

WHY I AM PROUD OF AMERICA

Why I am proud of America goes back to the voice in the clouds that said, "Give me Liberty or give me Death!" Also the voice in the bomb's smoke, "I have not yet begun to fight!" When all the patriots came forth to sign the Declaration of Independence. You know it could only be God who sent them. Those men went forth to give us freedom, freedom of the press, of speech, of worship, from want, and from fear. Those are whom we should thank. We should also thank God for what we have here on this earth. I am also proud of the rocks and trees, spacious skies, amber waves of grain, purple mountain majesties above the fruited plain. Now you know there is a God. Truly we have a beautiful America! We can only keep it that way if the people care.

Edgar Lee Lane 6th grade

WHY I AM PROUD OF AMERICA

Why am I proud to live in America? I am proud because we have beauty. Think of all the beauty God gave this land. America also has wealth and is not selfish with it either. You don't hear of us saying, "Give us our money back." We also have a fair government and lots of freedom: Freedom of the Press, Freedom from Want, Freedom from Fear, and Freedom to Vote. The U. S. is trying to stop Communism from spreading, by fighting in Viet Nam. But to me America is more than just a large piece of land - it is a symbol of peace, freedom and love.

Cecil Edward Winslow (Buck) 5th grade

WHY I AM PROUD TO BE AN AMERICAN

I am proud to be an American because America is a free and great country. It keeps Communism from getting into it. It keeps its people free. Its freedoms are: the Freedom of Worship, Freedom of Speech, Freedom of the Press, Freedom from Want, and Freedom from Fear.

I am proud to be an American because of all its beauty. This country has much beauty, but some people are just too lazy to notice it all. America is very beautiful too. We are Americans and we should be proud, very proud of it. I wonder who would ask for a better, freer, greater country. This is why I am proud to be an American. Can you ask for a better reason?

Nancy Elizabeth Swindell 5th grade

WHY I AM PROUD TO LIVE IN AMERICA

I am proud to live in America. It has beautiful scenery of lakes and mountains. America has hills, plains, valleys, and more. America has freedom of worship, freedom of vote, and freedom of speech.

America has wealth. Other countries have borrowed money. But do you hear American say, "I'll give you a month to pay back the money?"

America has freedom from fear. It has the right of trial by jury. The word America runs chills over my body. We have everything you could ask for. You name it, and America has it.

Must Brothers and Sisters Fight

Throughout the world, mothers and fathers come up against the same child-rearing problem: sibling rivalry. Be they Japanese, French, Moroccan or American offsprings, children will upset, irritate and exasperate their parents. And universally, parents wear themselves out trying to judge or referee the competition. The condition, however, need not exist. In the current issue of PAGEANT Magazine, Dr. Burton Siegel suggests how a blend of intelligent neglect and direct intervention by parents can bring peace and well-being to their homes.

Basically, the root of sibling rivalry is competition for attention and love. Parents should not react by berating the fighting child, or act as if he is a malicious kid. He is not trying to kill his sister; he is just frustrated because he is not getting something - attention, love or whatever. Another factor is that parents often encourage the rivalry. Rather than springing from the child's own natural jealousies or competitiveness, it can be due to something the parents say, as "Why can't you be a big girl like your sister?" The child automatically looks for some way to get back at her sister.

Dr. Siegel says that sibling rivalry first appears when a new member of the family arrives - the birth of a second child. To check a possible problem, the first child should be informed about three or four months before birth about the new addition. Once the mother goes off to the hospital he will need frequent explanations and reassurances so he will feel secure and loved. Because of the abrupt change in his daily routine, his resultant emotions may include anger (Mother has deserted him for a week), anxiousness (that there will still be enough attention, affection, toys, etc. to go around), worry (that he has to share his possessions) and even fright. When the mother returns, she should be affectionate and show him that he will get enough of everything.

After the baby is accepted, the next crucial stage is when the younger child starts to move around and grabs toys from the older. When arguments become physical, parents should urge the children to talk about their feelings - frequently the youngsters work out their problems and reach constructive solutions.

PAGEANT asked if parents should treat all their children equally. Dr. Siegel says, "I think this is absolutely impossible to do. A person just cannot have the same feelings all the time for different children. Equal treatment implies that youngsters are the same, and they just are not. They KNOW they are different and each one wants to be recognized for the person he is."

As children grow, parents must be alert to competitive situations and should try to bring problems into open discussion, reaching a conclusion through reasoning, and offering reassurance whenever possible. Eventually children reach an age where the amount of bickering is reduced and a spirit of cooperation develops; families grow closer as time goes by. People will always argue - they have different points of view. But it can have a positive side, other and develop some way of solving things themselves. It reassures youngsters as to their own autonomy and bolsters their self-confidence.

Discouraged because fewer than half of parking offenders bothered to pay their tickets, Japanese police began using a ticket on a metal loop that locks on car doors or side mirrors. Since the system was instituted in Japan's six largest cities, most motorists tagged have come to police stations to pay their fines and have the tickets removed.
