SENATOR SAM ERVIN * SAYS *

WASHINGTON - The President has signed into law the provision of the Voting Rights Act which provides for the lowering of the voting age to 18 years.

In doing so, the President again expressed doubts about the constitutionality of this provision as he did when the bill was before the Congress, but said that he would sign it into law and let the courts rule on this question. This is also the approach adopted by many members of Congress who voted for the bill when it won Senate and House approval. This is regrettable, because this casts the courts in the role of being the only branch of the government which seeks to determine whether a provision of law meets constitutional tests.

Actually, every member of Congress as well as the President takes an oath at the time he takes office to "support and defend the Constitution".

John S. Fletcher, II Administrator June 11, 18, 25, July 2-C and it is not sufficient to say that this is a matter for the courts.

As I have stated in this column previously, I voted against the statutory change allowing 18 year-olds to vote for two reasons.

First, this provision is plainly unconstitutional, if the Constitution has any vitality. By taking the statutory approach, this measure runs counter to four express provisions of the Constitution. These are: Article I, section 2, Article II, section 1, and the Tenth and Seventeenth Amendments to the Constitution which spell out in unequivocal language that the States have the power to prescribe qualifications for voting, subject only to the condition that race and sex cannot be used to deny any individual the right to vote.

Second, I think it was unwise to deal with the 18 year-old voting provision in summary fashion. Congress actually gave this provision only limited attention during the major arguments that were made concerning the extension of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 which was scheduled to expire in August of this year. The 18 year-old provision was never reviewed by the Senate Judiciary Committee, and it is to be remembered that when the House first considered the Voting Rights Act amendments, this provision was not included in that measure. When the bill was debated in the House again on June 17th, there was little time for individual members to express their views on this issue.

In saying these things, I recognize that there are compelling arguments that 18 year-olds be permitted to vote. Nonetheless, any change of this nature ought to be a matter for consideration by the state legislatures or by constitutional amendment, if federal action is deemed appropriate.

The Judicial Branch of the Federal Government has now been chosen to decide this issue. It is to be hoped that it will support and defend the Constitution and put aside "political expediency" which seems to have been the deciding factor in respect to this bill up to now.

Savings Bond Sales In State Soar

Savings Bonds sales in North Carolina continue at a record pace. Sales for the month of May and the January-May period are the best since 1945.

Series E bond sales in North Carolina during May amounted to $5,654,068, an increase of 18.7 per cent over sales during May of 1969. Total sales for May amounted to $5,893,962, an increase of 12.1 per cent over the comparable period last year.

January-May cumulative sales in North Carolina amounted to $28,302,865. This represents 44.7 per cent of the state's annual goal of $63,300,000.

Bland W. Worley, state volunteer chairman, expressed great pleasure in the way savings bonds sales continue to grow in North Carolina. He pointed out that the Bonds sold in this state have shown an increase each year since 1963. He went on to express confidence that sales in the state for 1970 will be greater than in any previous year.

Sales in Perquimans County for May were $9,579.00. January-May sales totaled $28,426.00. This represents 57 per cent of Perquimans County's goal of $49,879.00. According to R.L. Stevenson, Perquimans county volunteer chairman.

JULY DRAFT CALL

Public Buildings Of Perquimans County

by R. A. Winslow, Jr.

The January term of Court 1739 "taking into Consideration the great Necessity there is of a County Gaol, It is therefore hereby the Court ordered that the Sheriff of the said County Levy pursuant to Law on Each and every tythable within this County the Sum of three Shillings Towards Building a County Gaol and it is ordered that Macrora Scarborough & Nathaniel Caruthers, Esqrs. be hereby appointed to agree with workmen to build the Same & See to the Building and management thereof." (Gaol was an eighteenth-century spelling of jail.) The appearance and exact location of this first jail in Perquimans are unknown. As there were 765 thithables at that time, the jail tax should have yielded 114 pounds and 15 shillings. (Thithables were free males aged 16 years and over and male and female slaves aged 12 and over.)

Samuel Palmer was granted permission in October 1739 to build "a House here upon the Lott to Entertain People in." This house would serve as hotel, restaurant, saloon and stable and was to be erected on the Courthouse lot, the public ground. (Samuel was the son of Paul Palmer, one of the founders of Shiloh Baptist Church in Camden County, and his sister Martha Ann Kippen later ran a tavern in Edenton.)

Also in October 1739 the Court levied a tax of 2 shillings 6 pence in bills for the gaol and another tax of 1 shilling proclamation money or 7 shillings 6 pence in bills toward building a public warehouse 18 feet wide, 25 feet long and 12 feet high.

The year 1763 found Evan Skinner busy with the County's public buildings. In January he was given liberty to "Erect & Build a Sufficient house of Entertainment on the lott & half of Ground laid out for Public Buildings on Perquimans River on Phelps Point." He must have built immediately, as he was given licence in April to keep an ordinary (tavern) there. That same month he bought the public warehouse and undertook to repair the Courthouse. To the October Court he presented a bill for 8 pounds 2 shillings 6-1/2 pence proclamation money "for Repairing and Glaseing the Court house." He was given credit in that amount on the purchase price of the warehouse, remaining debtor to the County for another 10 pounds 10 shillings 9-1/2 pence proclamation money.

When the Courthouse was erected, the southern ferry landing had been moved westward to Phelps Point, to the shore behind the present home of Claude Brinn. The privilege of keeping the ferry on the south side was then vested in Jonathan Phelps. On the north side of the River the landing and privilege continued in possession of the Newby family.

In addition to his ferry-keeping duties, Nathan Newby was employed in April 1754 to make a "Good sufficient double Door to the Prison of Oak Planks and provide a Good Lock to be fixed in the Middle of the Door with a Good Bolt." About a year later he was ordered by the Court to "Erect and Compleat a warehouse on the Courthouse Lot for Inspection of Tobacco . . . 30 feet long, 20 feet wide with 7-1/2 pitch, a Squair Roof weather boarded with half Inch plank well Nailed with tempenny Nails, well Shingled with hart Syppres Shingles two feet long Nailed with 8 penny Nails to be Completed by November 1." He was to receive 37 pounds for this latter work.

What is an anticyclone? How often do they occur and how fast do they move?

An anticyclone in this hemisphere is a high pressure area. They occur just about every week in the year. An anticyclone is the opposite of a cyclone, which is a low pressure area.

Winds in an anticyclone circle blow clockwise and bring with them fair weather. These circular areas, large or small, move several hundred miles a day, usually from west to east, or sometimes slightly to the southeast.

In the winter, they move along a little faster than in summer and might travel 600 to 700 miles a day, according to the experts who study their movements. More often than not, you'll never refer to the high pressure areas which pass over you as anticyclones. Usage of the phrase "high pressure area" or just "high," has supplanted references to anticyclones.

PORTS OF CALL

...FOR TRAVEL AND ADVENTURE

By Edward H. Sims

Strasbourg, France--If one enjoys fine food--and most travelers do--Alsace in France is probably a better choice for the average American than Paris. Alsace is that province along the Rhine, bordering Germany and reaching southward to the Swiss border.

The scenery is more lovely the further south one goes and the food is unique, in many ways the best in France. It is not overly expensive. Strasbourg, the famous old Rhine port, and capital of the Council of Europe, is its biggest city--300,000 people--and the most interesting in many ways.

On a recent June night--a good time for eastern France--a group of us enjoyed dinner at Moulin de Wantzenau outside the city. The restaurant is in an old palace, where informality and good food are traditions.

In the beautiful farm country surrounding the palace much of the fresh food served is grown. For example, to begin the dinner waitresses came with large white dishes, their tops the shape of a bunch of asparagus. Inside were the excellent, long, white European asparagus, hot.

With vinaigrette or a special cheese sauce they are a fine start. The champagne, as a before-dinner cocktail for those who take it, and the wines with dinner, are very good. The Alsace white wines are famous and while not as renowned as German whites, rank with them.

This night we had rose wine with small pan-fried hens, plus salad and potatoes. Then came fresh strawberries from the farm, followed by the famous French cheese tray, with dark and white bread and crackers, then cognac and raspberry snaps--a clear drink not for children!

All the Frenchmen present appreciated the cuisine, including Madame Rieffel, Commissariat au Tourisme of the province, who sat next to me and explained the French philosophy of food. Madame Oksana Weller, our guide, and M.A. deComminges and Patrick Zeyen, approved each course. They know good French cooking. All four agree Alsace and nearby Champagne are provinces often overlooked by Americans visiting France--concentrating on Paris. Next day, deComminges and Zeyen drive, and Madame Weller as guide, the group was taken on one of France's most picturesque drives, down the wine road, through Obernai, Ribeauville, Riquewihr and Kayserberg to Colmar--another lovely city many Americans miss when visiting France. This is a highly recommended drive.

There's a special language in Alsace. Frenchmen deny vigorously it is part German but obviously it is heavily mixed with German, as inhabitants are racially mixed with German stock. Many have German names and, of course, Alsace was a part of Germany between 1870 and 1918. German architecture can be seen in the cities and one can get by speaking German--as the writer had to do.

Goethe once lived in Strasbourg and Albert Schweitzer played the church organ in one of Strasbourg's largest churches. Alsacians are proud that few Protestants were murdered in this city during the long period when the French government and church, cooperating, executed hundreds of thousands of Protestants, some of them the leading thinkers, from the best families, of France.

Legend has it the free city manned the ramparts and defied the government on the question of persecutions.
