QUINTET ABROAD WITH MODERN MUSIC
 NEW YORK (AP) — The Dorian Woodwind Quintet is spending May and June on tour under the auspices of the State Department.
 The Quintet will be heard on the BBC in London, then in concert in Berlin, Zurich and Rome. There will be three concerts in New Delhi and two in most other places which include Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, Ceylon, Iran, Cyprus and Lebanon.
 Places where two concerts are heard usually will have one of conventional music and one of Morton Subotnick's "The Misfortunes of the Immortals," 30-minute work for quintet, tape, lights and two films.

50 Acre Site Presented To NCSU For 4-H Club Youths

A 50-acre tract of land and summer home near here, valued at $200,000, was presented to North Carolina State University Wednesday (July 8) for use by the State's 4-H Club youths.
 Dr. H. Brooks James, dean of the NCSU School of Agriculture and Life Sciences, accepted the bequest from attorneys representing the estate of the late Mrs. Kathryn Arnold Kellogg of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.
 At a ceremony on the site, Hendersonville attorney Kenneth Youngblood presented the deed to the University for the perpetual use by the youth organization, which is headquartered at NCSU.
 Representing the 60,000 young people and 15,000 adult leaders who participate in 4-H Club work across the State were: J. D. Sykes of Flat Rock, a member of the 4-H Development Fund Executive Committee; Miss Kay Sloop of Statesville, State 4-H president; and Fred H. Wagoner, 4-H official at N. C. State University.
 Pasko H. Icenhour, assistant attorney general of North Carolina, represented the State Government.
 Governor Robert W. Scott and the Council of State earlier had approved the acquisition.
 The Governor and the Council of State recorded their "appreciation of the public spirited gesture by which Mrs. Kellogg, although a resident of Florida, expressed her devotion to and interest in the welfare of the people of North Carolina."
 NCSU Chancellor John T. Caldwell, who was out of State, said of Mrs. Kellogg's gift: "We are confident the property can be used in such a way as to respect and carry out the wishes expressed by Mrs. Kellogg in her will and at the same time make a definite contribution to the strength of our 4-H program."

 Caldwell said the property will be put to almost immediate use as a site for overnight camping programs, field trips and nature hikes for 4-H youths and similar organizations.
 He noted: "4-H has a long and proud history in this State. It has always maintained a strong, special interest in the areas of conservation and appreciation of our natural resources."
 Accompanying the prized tract of land, located on Rugby Road, Rt. 5, Hendersonville, was a bequest from Mrs. Kellogg of an apartment in Fort Lauderdale valued at $30,000.
 That apartment will be sold to maintain and provide funds for improvements of the site in Henderson County.
 According to Rudolph Pate, director of Foundations and Development at NCSU, the land will be administered by the North Carolina 4-H Development Fund, a non-profit corporation that supports 4-H work across North Carolina.
 Mrs. Kellogg also endowed the R. Gardner Kellogg Memorial for Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine of Wake Forest University at Winston-Salem.
 Mrs. Kellogg is survived by two daughters: Mrs. Julian E. Ross, Jr., of 600 Brickell Drive, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; and Mrs. John W. Colton of 7 Sherwood Ave., Pelham Manor, N.Y.

SENATOR SAM ERVIN SAYS

WASHINGTON - The postal reorganization bill which won Senate approval on June 30th contains a "union shop" provision which I strongly opposed during debate on this measure. The Senate version of the bill to convert the Post Office Department into an independent government agency differs from the House version which eliminated the compulsory unionism requirement for employees of the proposed U.S. Postal Service.
 I voted for the Fannin Amendment which would have assured all employees of the Postal Service the right, without fear of reprisal, to form or join labor organizations, or to refrain from such union activities. I regret that the Fannin Amendment was rejected by the Senate, because I believe that every man should have the right to join a union or the right to refrain from joining a union. I also believe that where persons voluntarily join a union - it makes no difference whether they are

Federal employees or employees of a private employer - they should have the right to negotiate through representatives of their choosing with their employer, whether it be the Federal Government or a private employer, in respect to conditions of their employment insofar as those conditions are not regulated by acts of Congress.
 The Senate-passed bill proposes for the first time in American history that Federal employees shall be compelled to pay to labor unions sums of money for the privilege of working for their government. It would give to unions as autocratic a power as the kings of France had in their most despotic days. Once the kings of France possessed almost absolute power over the lives of their subjects, and Frenchmen had to pay their king for the right to earn a living during that tyrannical era.
 Today, we find this doctrine enunciated by those who advocate compulsory unionism in the Postal Service.

Washington Report

Walter B. Jones
 Following the Fourth of July recess, the House settled down to one of the busiest weeks of the present session. Of the many bills considered, one of special interest to the First District was an amendment to the Federal Meat Inspection Act.
 The new legislation is designed to help the small custom slaughters and to exempt them from harassment of rigid inspections they have experienced since the original bill became law. This amendment would permit custom slaughters to buy and sell inspected meat and meat food products without losing the exemption they currently have under the act.
 It would also continue an exemption for owners to slaughter and process their own animals for their own use; provide that the Secretary could exempt custom slaughtering and processing performed by an inspected establishment; and specifically require for consumer protection that any custom-slaughtered articles be clearly marked as "not for sale."
 It was found that the application of the present law would work an undue hardship in many instances, especially in rural areas where it is a common practice to kill and dress an animal for local customers. It was the clear intent of the House that nothing in the amendment would be construed to weaken in any way the protection that the Act affords customers. The House also felt the changes would provide hunters and the nation's game industry a necessary and desirable service. The U.S. Department of Agriculture concurred with the changes.
 The House also approved an authorization for the controversial Peace Corps for fiscal 1971 in the amount of $98,800,000. I supported an amendment, which was unsuccessful, to cut this amount to $29 million. We were successful, however, in retaining language which would prohibit bringing students from foreign countries into the U.S. under a plan sometimes referred to as a "reverse Peace Corps."
 Quite often I have referred to the importance of a sound program in oceanography and the potential benefits to the fields of food, fuel, medicines and other derivatives from the oceans. The House approved an authorization bill I co-sponsored, providing funds for fiscal years 1971-72-73.
 This continues the Marine Resources and Engineering Development Act which established guidelines for structuring a national oceanographic program, with a Cabinet-level council under Vice President chairmanship. The Council was directed to coordinate on-going programs in marine affairs. The Commission was charged with creating a truly national program for oceanography and to make recommendations with respect to a government organization for that purpose.
 Congress continues to consider the Postal Reform Bill. The House version, passed a few weeks ago, contained the right-to-work provision, while the Senate deleted this.

A Painless Reminder . . .
 Because of the work done by John Harris, M.D., D.D., D.S., some of the "Ouch!" was taken out of oral surgery.
 Dr. Harris, who practiced in Ohio, conducted the first American School of Dental Surgery from 1825 to 1830. The modern system of dental education developed from this school. He was also honored as the first dentist to recognize the result of focal infection and its effect on general health.
 Dr. Harris, born in 1798, spent his last years as resident of Hertford. He died there July 26, 1849.

TREE HOUSE
 Sometimes grownups say wistfully, "I wish I were that age again." But do they really wish it? Being a child is wonderful, but maturing can be a painful process.
 Help your children enjoy the precious childhood hours—never forgetting that they must grow up. Remember you have a never-ending source of guidance. The church will help your children preserve the spirit of youth and give them the wisdom, courage and faith that will sustain them through the rest of their lives.
 There is joy in the tree house nestled high in the boughs . . . for the boys climbing up to play in it . . . for the adults remembering the golden afternoons of their own childhood.

International Sunday School Lesson for July 19, 1970.
MEMORY SELECTION: "So God created man in His own image, in the image of God created He him: male and female created He them." — (Genesis 1:27)
LESSON TEXT: Genesis 1:26 to 2:25; Psalm 8; Matthew 10: 28-31; Acts 17:26-28; I Corinthians 15:45-50.
 Within the concepts of our modern-day technology and our understanding, as we advance in understanding of things hitherto mysterious, we become increasingly aware of the orders of the universe.
 Our studies, today, continue within the framework of the story of creation. God made the world, and all the forms of life contained therein. To enjoy the universe to its fullest, and to enjoy the fruits of His labors, then created He man — made in His own image, endowed with a brain and a soul. And, just as He ordered the seasons and the tides of the oceans, He endowed man and woman with the still mysterious powers of procreation, that this world He had fashioned might continue to be populated by His most wonderful of handiworks!
 For God had a plan for mankind; He commanded: "Let there be light!" — and the places which had heretofore been dark, became light! . . . "Let there be grass! — and there was grass! But when He created man, He did not command. He made a simple statement: "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness . . ." Man was His supreme creation; he was to have dominion over the world. He was to fulfill God's own plan to the utmost: Man was to be God's goal in creation. Man was created in the image of God, and he was destined — although not a divine creature, such as Christ — to be actively concerned in the moral, rational and spiritual nature of God. He was to be actively aware of God's purpose for him, and subject to the Divine will.
 And, despite man's constant falling from grace throughout the ages, although he has repeatedly failed God, God has never failed him! In all honesty we must admit that our record of stewardship of God's great gift to us has been more than a little disappointing . . . to say the least. Yet He has never failed to give us another chance!
 The continuance of life after death concerns every one of us. And we grow more pre-occupied with this question as we grow older, as our days upon the earth which is so familiar to us, diminish. We grow increasingly aware, as we get older, that our time is running out, and we look back on our lives and question the wisdom of our actions. Have we truly fulfilled our part in God's plan for mankind, or have we frittered away the opportunities that have presented themselves to us?
 In this workaday, practical world in which we live, we are constrained to make a living — not only for ourselves, but for those who are dependent upon us, and with whose well-being we are charged. We are, nonetheless, constrained to work for God. One obligation is essential to our physical well-being; the other obligation is even more essential for our spiritual well-being!
 "And on the seventh day He rested . . ." God, the Omnipotent, did not need to rest. He was merely setting an example for mankind. The Sabbath is set aside for man to render thanks unto his Creator for the blessings with which he has been showered; he is granted a day from his labors in which to seek communion with his Creator, to gain sustenance and spiritual strength, that he might more adequately function in God's plan!
 Death is not the end of all things to all men. Rather, it is a beginning . . . and we must not lose sight of this fact. Our place in God's infinite plan is assured!
