

House Large Family At Moderate Cost

Persons with a large family and a modest income need not give up the idea of owning a house that will meet their needs. A house plan that could accommodate up to a dozen family members is available from the Perquimans County Agricultural Extension office.

The house features plenty of storage space, two full baths, kitchen with laundry area, living room, three bedrooms and a large dormitory-style bedroom.

The work area - L-shaped kitchen and laundry - are readily accessible to the outside. The additional storage area on the back of the house can be used for water heater, freezer, canned food, and lawn equipment. Other storage areas include: bedroom closets, linen closet, and coat closet near the living room entrance.

The house contains 1,360 square feet. Complete working drawings of the plan are available from the county extension office or from Biological and Agricultural Engineering Extension at North Carolina State University.

The plan was developed by the Extension Housing Specialist, N. C. State University, as part of Extension's effort to help families meet their housing needs.

WASHINGTON NEWS REPORT

Washington, D.C. - It's generally agreed in Congress that Defense Secretary Melvin Laird did an effective job in taking the public relations offensive to explain the daring raid on Hanoi recently, which however failed to free U.S. prisoners because of poor or inadequate intelligence.

In addition, President Nixon's decoration of the men who led that raid, and his statement to the American people that the U.S. Government is concerned over the ill treatment of U.S. prisoners in North Vietnamese hands, appealed to the majority of Americans.

But the question remains, in the minds of many Congressmen, whether the U.S. is breaking the secret 1968 agreement with Hanoi in mounting large-scale air raids against North Vietnam, which was done in May as well as November, and justified as retaliation for the downing of U.S. reconnaissance aircraft.

Hanoi has broken the agreement on several occasions, in Washington's opinion, and the latest violation was the rocket shelling of South Vietnamese civilians. But, generally speaking, both sides have abided by the three main points of the agreement. And President Nixon has steadily withdrawn U.S. troops at a faster pace than the withdrawal schedule he originally announced.

Most Washington observers think the North Vietnamese will refrain from escalating the war again so long as the President continues to withdraw American soldiers at a rapid pace. Some fear, however, that the North Vietnamese may be building up military supplies to be ready to assault South Vietnam heavily as soon as the bulk of U.S. forces are back in America. The raids on North Vietnamese military stockpiles are, in a sense, a warning that U.S. air power remains strong and is likely to remain potent in the area for a long time to come.

There are those on Capitol Hill, including Senator William Fulbright, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who think the President has violated the 1968 agreement and who are thus gravely concerned with the consequences. But the doves have lost some of their steam since the recent elections, in which several were defeated.

The President knows he has only two years left in which to bring about something acceptable in Vietnam and he doesn't believe the timid or weak approach will produce progress. But there are also indications Mr. Nixon might not have known all the details of the latest U.S. air action in North Vietnam until after the actions had occurred. If Secretary Laird knew all the details, he was less than accurate in several of his explanations to reporters.

"Ye-es, parson," said the impenitent Stephen, "but you see, today it's my turn to be happy."

Comment On Sports

Washington, D.C. - It's a tribute to the spirit and color of the Army-Navy football game that almost a hundred thousand fans gathered recently to watch their very unimpressive teams do battle in the 1970 Philadelphia classic.

The teams were so poor during the season, however, that for the first time in memory seats were available; a little better record by the teams in 1971 will change that, and surely the academics have reached their low points.

Out in Colorado Springs the Air Force has demonstrated what a service academy team can do in modern times. The Falcons were awesome this year, though Oregon and Colorado upended them at the last of a very impressive season.

The service academies should each play the others but this year Army and Air Force didn't meet. The Falcons dumped Navy 28-3 and would almost surely have dumped Army. The only way to build colorful rivalries, two more service games of the interest of the Army-Navy game, is to start the tradition and continue it.

The time should come when Air Force-Navy, Air Force-Army and Army-Navy games are all major spectacles and events of the college football season and while the former two games might not be as colorful as Army-Navy for some years, in time these games-too will have a great tradition, and attract great interest, also.

BREAKFAST IN SCHOOL

The Agriculture Department has announced approval of a new, enriched breakfast roll to take the place of fruit juice and bread or cereal served at schools and day-care centers. It is reported the roll is the first product to be approved for Government-aided child feeding programs.

COTTON CROP UP

The Agriculture Department has estimated the 1970 cotton crop at 10,428,900 bales, 4 per cent more than in 1969 but 2 per cent less than the October forecast. However, the yield per acre is slightly less than anticipated earlier.

Hostess To Bridge Club

Miss Thelma Elliott was hostess to her bridge club Tuesday night at her home on Riverside Drive. Players were Mrs. V.N. Darden, Mrs. T.F. Brinn, Mrs. C.E. Johnson, Mrs. Montfort Haslam, Mrs. Charles Whedbee, Mrs. Eldon Winslow, Mrs. H.C. Sullivan and the hostess.

Mrs. Darden was high score winner. A sweet course was served.
