SENATOR SAM ERVIN SAYS

WASHINGTON - Again, at the opening of the 92nd Congress, it is advocated by some that Rule X of the Senate be amended. While I am always intrigued by the arguments made by those who wish to amend Rule XXII, I do not favor any proposal which would whittle down the present rule so that a bare majority, or even 80% of the Senators, would be allowed to silence the other 40%.

The fundamental concept of the Senate has always been that the least shall be heard and counted along with and equal to the many. Unlimited debate inevitably brings its abuses, but it is well to remember the admonition of the noted author William F. White when he stated in substance - Any rule which can be used today to silence a troublesome demagog can be used tomorrow to silence a brave man fighting for a righteous cause, and the pleading minority of today may be the arrogant majority of tomorrow.

It should be remembered also that the United States Senate is the only legislative body now existing on the face of the earth with rules designed to secure to minorities a reasonable opportunity to express their views, and that this body has established a standard for determining how long a Senator can speak. This standard is embodied in Rule XXII, which provides that a Senator or a group of Senators can speak upon a pending bill until two-thirds of the Senators in attendance vote to end the debate. This rule gives the Senate its distinctive character and has enabled the Senate on many occasions in times past to stand as a bulwark for the preservation of constitutional government and individual liberty.

In my judgment, if a majority of the Senate is ever given the power to prevent a substantial minority to stand on the floor of the Senate and tell the truth about pending legislative proposals, the fear expressed by the French political philosopher, Alexis de Tocqueville, in his book, "Democracy in America," that the United States is in danger of being destroyed by the power of a majority will be realized, and that moment will mark the death knell of liberty for all Americans.

My view on this subject is supported by many of the most illustrious Senators in times past who have taken the position that an easy closure rule would sound the death knell of freedom of debate in this body. The late Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming, who was a great liberal in the true sense of that much-abused term, stated in debate a few years ago that Rule XXII in its present form must be preserved if the Senate is to remain a forum of free speech for the benefit of this country. I agree.

Changes In The Wage-Hour Law Effective February 1, 1971

"The standard federal minimum wage continues at $1.60 an hour. However, since certain employees who were covered under the February 1, 1967 amendments will go to $1.60 an hour effective February 1, 1971, rumors have developed that the standard minimum has changed. This is not so," according to Henry A. Huettner, regional director of the Wage-Hour Division, U.S. Department of Labor, Atlanta.

For employment covered prior to February 1, 1967 the minimum wage remains at $1.60, with overtime after 40 hours per week. Such employment includes establishments engaged in manufacturing, wholesaling, and certain large enterprises having some employees engaged in handling, selling or working on goods that have moved or will move in interstate commerce, along with large retail enterprises with volume in excess of $1 million per annum. Certain jobs are specifically exempt from the overtime provisions of the Act.
