Belvin Named V.P. Of Norfolk Div. Of Colonial Stores

R. L. Belvin has been named vice president of the Norfolk Division of Colonial Stores Incorporated succeeding E. B. Rowe, who is retiring after 45 years with the retail food chain. Mr. Belvin has been vice president of Colonial's Raleigh Division since 1966 and prior to that headed the firm's Jacksonville (Fla.) Division. He is a native of Norfolk where he became associated with Colonial in 1932.

Both men were honored at a dinner tonight at the Norfolk Yacht and Country Club, attended by more than 100 Norfolk civic and business leaders.

Ernest F. Boyce, president of Colonial and principal speaker at the dinner, paid tribute to Mr. Rowe for his "unusual ability to develop the talents of those who were responsible to him."

Mr. Rowe was presented with a special citation from stockholders of Colonial for meritorious service which said: "His leadership qualities, coupled with his great professional ability, a driving energy and a reputation for honesty and integrity among his fellows, won him a respect which few have achieved."

Mr. Rowe became associated with Colonial in 1926. He became Colonial vice president in Norfolk, with responsibility for operation of the company's 79 supermarkets in Virginia, Maryland and parts of North Carolina, in 1960. Prior to that, he managed Colonial's Raleigh Division.

Mr. Rowe is a past president of the Virginia Retail Council and the Tidewater Better Business Bureau. He has been a director of the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce and the Norfolk Retail Merchants Association and is a member of Rotary.

Mr. Belvin served as a director and member of the Board of Trustees of the United Fund of Wake County in Raleigh and was a director of the North Carolina Retail Merchants Association. Mr. Belvin will continue to have responsibility for Colonial's Raleigh Division.

Social Security Administration

With few exceptions, every social security beneficiary who earned over $1,680.00 in 1970 must file an annual report of earnings with social security before April 15. Failure to make this report on time could result in financial loss to the beneficiary.

Although this requirement is highly publicized and a personal explanation is given every applicant for social security, some fail to make the report and wind up losing money.

Several rules have been outlined concerning the annual report and anyone unsure about it should get expert help by calling the social security office for more information.

Nearly all beneficiaries who received social security payments in 1970 and earned over $1,680.00 must make the report. This included widows, wives, and children as well as the retired beneficiary. However, beneficiaries who were 72 years old during all of 1970 need not report.

Many types of income received by beneficiaries do not count as earned income and need not be reported. Some of these are private retirement benefits.

Hog Cholera Surveillance Ends

Federal Coordination of hog cholera surveillance in southeastern Virginia and northeastern North Carolina will terminate (April 1) with the departure of U.S. Department of Agriculture's Task Force Coordinator, Dr. Clinton P. Hughes.

Dr. Hughes assumed his coordinating responsibilities when the main Task Force operation was concluded last November. Assisting him as Virginia Coordinator has been Dr. G.H. Frye of Nebraska. Dr. Frye will remain at Ivor, Va., for several weeks in a liaison capacity.

Dr. L.A. Hill was North Carolina Coordinator until recently returning to his home station in Illinois.

Coordinating responsibilities for hog cholera surveillance in the two-State area, previously carried out under the Task Force structure, will now revert to normal State-Federal cognizance within the individual States of Virginia and North Carolina.

Dr. C.W. Griffin, State Area Veterinarian at Ivor, Va., will assume full coordinating responsibility in southeastern Virginia.

Dr. H.C. Jackson, Federal District Veterinarian at Edenton, N.C., will assume full coordinating responsibility in northeastern North Carolina.

USDA's Animal Health Division offices at Ivor, Va., and Elizabeth City, N.C., will remain open until about May 1. State and Federal veterinarians especially trained in hog cholera diagnosis will continue to be available, indefinitely.

Virginia and North Carolina swine producers are encouraged to call their county extension agents concerning any suspicious of hog cholera; or they may call State-Federal animal health officials at one of the following telephone numbers: (703) 859-4411 at Ivor, Va., and (919) 335-5473 at Elizabeth City, N.C.

The State Diagnostic Laboratories at Ivor, Va., and Edenton, N.C., can also be of assistance. An intensified State-Federal eradication campaign began last September when an area encompassing five counties and four cities of southeastern Virginia and six counties of northeastern North Carolina were placed under quarantine for hog cholera. This was after State authorities requested special assistance from USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

By late November, all counties and cities were cleared of infection and the last Federal and State quarantine was lifted. The main operation was terminated, but a scaled-down surveillance force has remained until now to guard against latent hog cholera flareups.

Surveillance proved valuable in the first few months of this year when five more infected herds were disclosed. A portion of Isle of Wight County, Va., remains under quarantine for hog cholera in the vicinity of the last case found in the county, March 8. The infected herd was destroyed, however; and there is no apparent danger of the disease spreading from that location.

Hog cholera is a contagious viral disease that affects swine only. Before the National Eradication Program began in late 1962, hog cholera was costing the American swine industry about $40 million annually for vaccination plus another $10 million annually in herd losses. Target date for a "hog cholera free" United States is December 1972.
