Farmers Home Administration Makes Housing Loans Available To Towns Up To 10,000 Population

For the first time, families now living in towns or places between 5500 and 10,000 population are eligible to apply for housing loans from Farmers Home Administration, according to James T. Johnson, the agency's State Director.

Until recent legislative changes, only families in rural areas or places not over 5500 population were eligible. The new limit will enable some 50,000 North Carolina families to become eligible for FHA rural housing loans.

Families living in the following North Carolina towns are now eligible: Arlington-Jonesville-Elkin area, Beaufort, Boone, Canton, Clinton, Dunn, Hen-riersonville, Kings Mountain, Marion, Morehead City and Mooresville. Others are Mount Airy, Newton, Oxford, Rockingham, Roxboro, Longhurst, Smithfield, Southern Pines-Aberdeen, Washington, Waynesville, Whiteville, Williamston, and Wilkesboro-North Wilkesboro.

This new authority now applies to all regular Farmers Home Administration rural housing programs, such as individual housing loans, rental housing loans, site loans, and rural housing disaster loans. The legislation in effect changed the definition of rural areas so that now a rural area is a place of open country or one which has a population not over 10,000, as it applies to FHA's housing program.

Mr. Johnson said that residents now living in places between 5500 and 10,000 who were previously not eligible, and who cannot obtain housing loans from private sources, should contact the local FHA county office serving the County. In addition to receiving prompt action on their application, Mr. Johnson stated that sufficient funds were available to take care of all applicants applying this fiscal year.

FHA rural housing loans are made to individual families to construct a new home, to purchase an existing home, or to improve an existing home. Loans are made on terms of 33 years and the present interest rate is 7 1/4 per cent.

Farmers Home Administration is expecting to double its number of housing loans in North Carolina, said Mr. Johnson. We expect to loan over $90 million for housing in North Carolina. This new authority affords our agency an excellent opportunity to help thousands of North Carolina families who before were not eligible for our assistance and could not obtain financing from other sources.

Mr. Johnson advised those families living in the newly affected areas who need housing to contact the local office of the Farmers Home Administration.

Farm And Household Employees Can Request Income Tax Withholding

GREENSBORO - For the first time, agricultural, household and certain other employees may choose voluntarily, if their employers agree, to have income taxes withheld from their wages under regulations published in the Federal Register for Thursday, March 18, 1971.

J. E. Wall, District Director, said that final regulations authorize voluntary withholding on wages paid on or after January 1, 1971. Proposed regulations were published in the Federal Register on that date.

Agricultural employers will report tax withheld on the annual Form 943 along with Social Security taxes. Beginning April 1, Agricultural employers will become subject to the same rules for depositing these taxes that apply to other employers. Until then, Social Security taxes are deposited in Federal Reserve and authorized commercial banks in accordance with the current rules.

Income tax withheld on household workers will be submitted quarterly with the Form 942 or the Form 941, if applicable.

The Tax Reform Act of 1969 permits the extension by regulation of income tax withholding, where appropriate on a voluntary basis, to certain types of income which are not subject to mandatory income tax withholding. Thus, employees not subject to mandatory income tax withholding may be able to avoid having to pay estimated tax if they request the newly allowed withholding and their employers agree.

The new regulations cover most employees not otherwise subject to mandatory withholding. The regular rules on withholding rates, agreements for additional withholding filing requirements, etc. also apply to voluntary withholding.

If there is no withholding currently, an employee may request voluntary withholding by filing a Form W-4, Employee's Withholding Exemption Certificate, with his employer.

The regulations provide a procedure for requesting voluntary withholding for a limited period of time.

The agreement becomes effective when the employer accepts it by beginning the withholding. Either may terminate the agreement by notifying the other in writing giving proper notice in accordance with the regulations.

Additional withholding, over and above the regular withholding rates, may be requested. For example, a clergyman who enters into a voluntary income tax withholding agreement with his church may have additional amounts withheld to cover his self-employment tax. Others may want to request additional withholding to avoid paying estimated tax.

Veterans Administration

The Director of the Veterans Administration Regional Office in Winston-Salem today reported 75,000 North Carolina veterans were insured for $603,145,000 under five government life insurance programs in 1970.

W.R. Phillips, Director said North Carolina veterans also received $4,301,000 in dividends during the year.

The VA official's comments were based on the agency's recently released annual report on insurance operations.

Nationally, Phillips noted, more than five million veterans were insured for about $38 billion last year, and income from all five insurance programs totalled just over $1 billion.

The report revealed that VA paid nearly $301 million in death claims, and another $180 million as monthly income based on earlier claims.

Other VA insurance transactions included payment of $30 million in disability benefits to one group of policy holders, and $52 million to another group whose endowment policies matured.

In addition, Phillips said VA authorized a record $275 million in dividends to be paid this year to veterans holding World War I United States Government Life Insurance and World War II National Service Life Insurance policies.

Veterans chose to leave about $52 million in dividends with VA to draw interest in 1970. Also during the year VA placed $105 million in policy reserve accounts.

VA's annual insurance report took note of the enactment of Public Law 91-291 last June which liberalized some aspects of the agency's insurance operations.

For example, one provision increased coverage of servicemen on active military duty under Servicemen's Group Life Insurance (SGLI) from a maximum of $10,000 to $15,000.

Phillips said the law also extended coverage to reservists, members of the National Guard, and the Reserve Officers Training Corps while these groups participate in specific training exercises, and while travelling to and from such training.

Although VA supervised SGLI, the program is operated by about 600 private insurance firms under a group contract with a primary insurer.

VA's annual insurance report is being distributed to members of Congress, service organizations, insurance firms and associations, state libraries and other public organizations.

You're going to plant sorghum. Now what about weed control?

Experienced sorghum growers will tell you to control weeds and grasses as early as possible. And nothing controls them earlier than Milogard® herbicide.

Milogard goes on pre-emerge. Before sorghum or weeds have emerged. As weeds germinate, they absorb the Milogard through the roots, turn yellow and die. They never get a chance to damage yields because Milogard never lets them get big enough to compete for moisture and nutrients.

You only need one application of Milogard, at planting or right after, to control most of the annual weeds and grasses in your field, right up to harvest. You won't find a safer herbicide for sorghum, or to use next to other crops. And cotton, soybeans, or corn can follow next year.

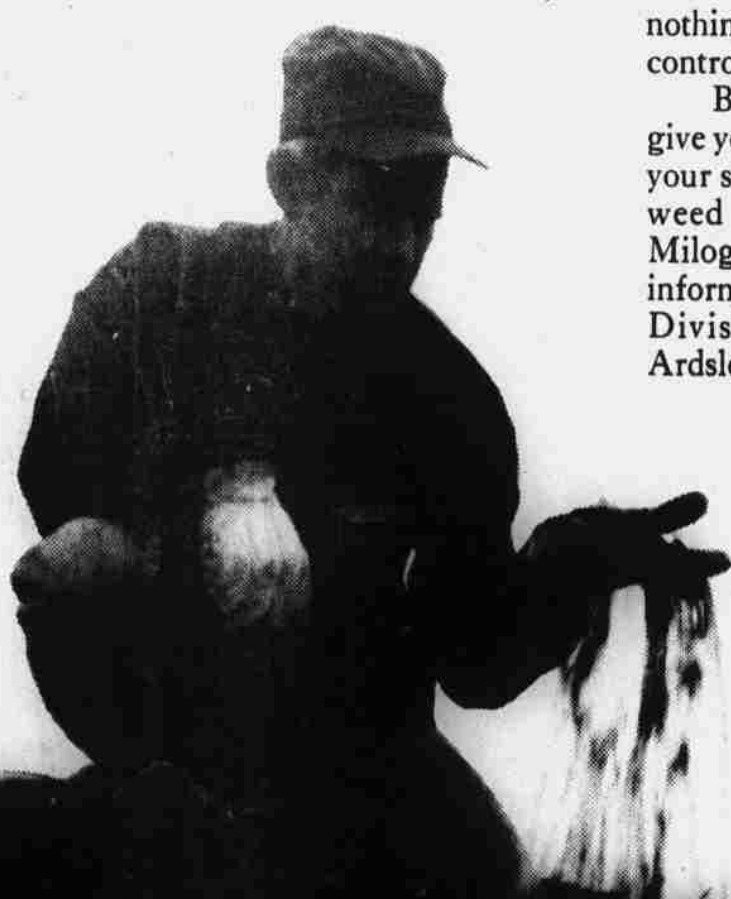

Application is easy. Use a ground rig or airplane. Do it right from the drill or planter if you like. Or weed 'n feed in liquid fertilizer. Any way you spray it, you'll get early, safe, pre-emerge weed control only Milogard can give.

But if you can't get Milogard on before sorghum or weeds emerge, then AAtrex® herbicide gives you a second chance. A post-emerge spray of AAtrex can still rescue sorghum from weeds and grasses for the rest of the season, right up to harvest.

AAtrex has both residual and contact action. It kills newly germinated weeds as well as those yet to come. And AAtrex is much safer to sorghum and nearby crops than 2,4-D.

Band it, spray solid, or fly it on. But follow the AAtrex label for best results. There's nothing better for post-emerge weed and grass control in sorghum.

Both herbicides save on cultivations, and give you better weed control besides. So talk to your supplier now about pre- and post-emerge weed and grass control in sorghum with Milogard and AAtrex. S. O. D. Save Our Daylight

Whether you're a saving soul or not, it's a sure bet that, come Sunday, you'll begin saving daylight...

We're not certain where this dubious system originated. It has no scientific basis. Ostensibly, some lonely party type devised a plan to keep norman sleepers up an hour later during the Summer.

Britain first used the system during World War I. Not to be outdone, the U.S. adopted Daylight Saving in 1918.

As for us, we're in favor of the old Zzz method (Znatural Zuntime Zystem).
