Thought to Remember

By MARION SWINDELL
It is told that a visitor from a foreign country made this comment about America when he returned home. "The saddest thing about the United States is everyone is trying to run away from themselves."

It does appear that in our search for happiness, adventure and pleasure—we are in a constant race. To find it—we run, and many times we appear to be running away from ourselves.

You can't be against modernization, it has made life much more enjoyable. You can take time, though, to pause and "patch up."

The happiest people are those who take time. Time to enjoy—time to plant a garden, time to watch it grow. You are then waiting—and you can't run away from yourself if you wait.

OUR THOUGHT TO REMEMBER: The greatest rewards come to those who wait.
