Three Local Students Attain Recognition At N.C.S.U.

Students at North Carolina State University established a new high in academic excellence during the fall semester when 2,848 earned Dean's List honors, Chancellor John T. Caldwell announced.

The total, highest during the 82-year history of the State's Land-Grant University, meant that more than one of every four undergraduates achieved honors.

In sharp contrast, only 323 students were suspended during the same period due to academic difficulties.

Winning Dean's List honors were men and women who mastered demanding studies in the sciences, technologies, arts and humanities taught at NCSU.

Every section of North Carolina was represented on the Dean's List, as were other states from the Atlantic to the Pacific and other nations.

A blue-ribbon list of 186 men and women achieved perfect records of 4.0.

The others earned their honors by compiling averages of 3.0 or higher.

Coads, who now constitute a fifth of the enrollment at NCSU, comprise a sizeable segment of the honors list.

Married students, many of them parents, also scored high. The Dean's List record for the fall semester showed marked increases both in numbers and percentage over the list a year ago when 2,465 students, or 22 per cent, of the undergraduates earned honors.

Chancellor Caldwell announced that three students from Perquimans County attained recognition for outstanding scholarship.
