Thought to Remember

By MARION SWINDELL

In a remote section of Italy there was a small village that was known for its prized possession—an active and elegant aqueduct which wound its way down the mountainside. For centuries it had stood and served carrying water from the pure mountain pools to the little village below.

Modernization came to the village... a modern water system was installed, and the old aqueduct was no longer needed to bring in the precious mountain water.

The townspeople decided to keep their much-loved aqueduct as a memorial... and to preserve it as a famous landmark. "It has served long... let's cut off its supply of water," they said.

The water was diverted from its source... and the aqueduct was given, what they thought to be, a long-needed rest. In a few days the sides began to split... and as the masonry and the ancient stonework dried in the sun... the wonderful old aqueduct began to fall apart. In a very short time it was almost completely destroyed. What centuries of service had failed to do... man's hand had accomplished in a few short weeks.

Our thought, to remember: ONLY THROUGH SERVICE IS FULLNESS ACHIEVED.
