More Soybeans And Cotton Less Grains

North Carolina farmers intend to plant more soybeans and cotton, about the same acreage of peanuts but less tobacco and feed grains than last year. These findings are based on an Intentions Survey conducted about March 1 by the N.C. Crop Reporting Service. Acreage plans, to a large degree, reflect changes in the farm program for 1972.

Soybeans are expected to increase 11 per cent to 1,175,000 acres despite the uncertainty of an adequate supply of good seed. High soybean prices and changes in the farm program which allow soybeans to be planted to protect the feed grain base are major factors behind this increase.

N.C. farmers intend to plant 205,000 acres of cotton this spring - a 6 per cent increase from a year ago. In January farmers reported intentions to hold cotton acreage to last year's level.

Flue-cured tobacco acreage is expected to drop 1 per cent. Intentions for barley are up 6 per cent. Peanut acreage at 1.537,000 is virtually unchanged.

Mrs. Taylor stated today that probably just another of our popular misconceptions. Many of us tend to think that older be young with them." is children as easily a younger mothers. A classic study of child rearing does not support this belief

Sears, Maccoby, and Levin classified younger mothers as those age 27 or less who have a child in the first grade. These mothers will have two children by age 21 or 22. Older mothers in this case are those who start having children at age 22 or 23 The authors found that the older mothers were somewhat warmer or more affectionate toward all their children than the younger mothers. For the first child there was very little difference in the two groups of mothers. However, for all children past the first the older mothers were more affectionate. This fact was true regardless of social class, sex of the child, or time between children.

The common assumption that younger mothers have more energy, moreflexibility, and thus more affection for children is not supported by this study. authors mention explanations (Continued on Page 6)
